

Contents

Introduction	page	vii
Editions and Abbreviations of Popper's Works		ix
Acknowledgments		xi
I Popper's Conception of Epistemology		1
1 The central problem of epistemology		1
2 Initial opposition to justificationism		4
II Inductive Method		10
III Inductive Argument and Popper's Alternative		16
1 Inductive justification		16
2 Popper's 'solution' to the problem of induction		23
3 Inductive logic		31
4 Corroboration and reliance		36
5 Severe tests		42
6 Verisimilitude		47
IV Reinstatement of Induction		57
1 Induction: a transcendental argument		57
2 A 'whiff' of inductivism		62
V Observation and Theory		68
1 Fries's trilemma: the unjustifiability of observation statements		68
2 The verification argument		75
3 Hypotheses and evidence		80
VI Falsification and Scientific Explanations		90
1 Realism and instrumentalism		90
2 The demarcation criterion		96
3 Relativism in science		111

VII	Probability and Indeterminism	124
	1 The falsification of probability statements	124
	2 Subjective and frequency theories of probability	125
	3 Popper's propensity theory of probability	132
	4 Realism, propensities and indeterminism	137
VIII	Reason and Society	147
	1 Rationalism and irrationalism	147
	2 The open society and social science	153
IX	Evolution and World Three	171
	1 Evolution	171
	2 Evolution and epistemology	175
	3 World Three: Popper's Platonism	181
	4 The self-conscious mind	200
	Conclusion: Popper's Scepticism	205
	Bibliography	208
	Index	213