

Contents

Part I. Objects

1. The Problem of Non-Existence	3
1.1 'About'	3
1.2 Relational conceptions of intentionality	8
1.3 Non-existent objects	13
1.4 Truths about the non-existent	18
1.5 Existence, being, and reality	23
1.6 Conclusion and prospectus	27
2. Existence and Quantification	28
2.1 Introduction	28
2.2 The formalization of claims about existence and non-existence	29
2.3 'Exists' as a predicate	32
2.4 Quantification in natural language	34
2.5 How to quantify over non-existents	37
2.6 Existential sentences: 'there is'/'there are'	42
2.7 Quantification, ontological commitment, and 'believing in'	47
2.8 Conclusion: the irrelevance of quantification	50
3. The Nature of Existence and Non-Existence	52
3.1 The problem posed by non-existents	52
3.2 Truth about the non-existent: the logical approach	53
3.3 Truth about the non-existent: the metaphysical approach	58
3.4 Properties and relations	64
3.5 Negative existentials	71
3.6 Do fictional characters exist?	75
3.7 Fundamentality and existence	81
3.8 Conclusion to Part I	85

Part II. Thought

4. The Structure of Intentionality	89
4.1 Introduction: non-existence and intentionality	89
4.2 Varieties of intentional object	90
4.3 Varieties of intentional content	96
4.4 Varieties of intentional mode	102
4.5 Propositionalism	108

4.6 Existing objects of thought	112
4.7 Conclusion: representation as basic	116
5. Reductionism and Psychologism	118
5.1 Introduction: truths about the non-existent and their explanation	118
5.2 The idea of reduction	122
5.3 Reductionism and the propositional attitudes	125
5.4 The reduction of indeterminate intentional objects	131
5.5 The reduction of non-existent intentional objects	133
5.6 Conclusion: varieties of reduction	137
6. Thinking about Specific Things	138
6.1 Introduction	138
6.2 Specific thought, singular terms, and singular thought	139
6.3 Names and thought	143
6.4 Acquaintance and existence-dependence	146
6.5 De Re thought	153
6.6 Psychology and semantics again	156
6.7 Specific thoughts: a psychologistic account	158
6.8 No identity without an entity	162
6.9 Conclusion: reductionism and specific thought	167
Concluding Remarks	168
Bibliography	170
Index	181