

Contents

Preface	vii
Editor's Introduction	xi
1. Introductory Remarks	1
2. The Problem of Carneades: Variations on a Theme	16
A. The concept of the πιθανόν and its modifications	16
B. Husserl's concept of problematic possibilities and the field of the unproblematic	21
C. Topical relevance and the concept of familiarity; imposed and intrinsic relevances	26
D. The interpretative relevance	35
E. The motivational relevance; in-order-to and because motives	45
3. The Interdependency of the Systems of Relevance	53
A. The habitual possessions of knowledge	53
B. Familiarity and strangeness; types and typicality; things taken for granted	56
C. Typicality and interpretative relevance	63
D. Interest and motivational relevance	64
E. The stock of knowledge at hand	66
F. The interdependence of the three systems of relevance	68
G. Shortcomings of this presentation; reference to further problems	71

4. The Stock of Knowledge at Hand Genetically Interpreted	75
A. Introduction: The heterogeneous character of the stock of knowledge at hand as the outcome of sedimentation	75
B. Degrees of plausibility and diexodos	76
C. Polythetic and monothetic reflection	78
D. Units of meaning-context	86
E. The chronological sequence of sedimentation and the system of relevance	98
5. Disturbances of the Process of Sedimentation	103
A. Disappearance of the topic	104
B. The process temporarily interrupted	113
C. Recommencing the process	121
6. The Stock of Knowledge at Hand Structurally Interpreted	133
A. The dimensions of the lifeworld	134
B. Knowledge of acquaintance and the concept of familiarity	141
7. The Biographical Situation	167
A. Structurization by orientation: the "frame of reference" (Urarche Erde)	167
B. My own body: espace vécu	171
C. The "hic" and the "illic"	175
D. World within my reach and topological organization	176
E. The time-structure	179
Index	183