

Contents

Human, All Too Human? (Introduction and Homage to Ivan Sviták), by Joseph Grim Feinberg	7
Essay I: The Human Being and Utopia	27
anti-essay 1: the monologue of Alexander's sword	34
Essay II: Interpreting a Work of Art	35
anti-essay 2: introduction to dialectical materialism	43
Essay III: Conscience of the Nation? Literature of the Consumer Society	46
anti-essay 3: little base and little superstructure	57
Essay IV: The Art of the Epoch	59
anti-essay 4: the story of a sword	64
Essay V: The Civilization of the Eye	68
anti-essay 5: feeling	71
Essay VI: Evolutions in the Structure of Film Language	72
anti-essay 6: the monologue of a human shadow	79
Essay VII: Prolegomena to Love	80
anti-essay 7: a private mythology	90
Essay VIII: The Historical Limits of Surrealism	95
anti-essay 8: the law of ketman	110
Essay IX: The Surrealist Image of Humankind	111
anti-essay 9: labyrinth	118
Essay X: Surrealism and Art	121
anti-essay 10: the dialectics of wisdom	127
Essay XI: Questions of Surrealism (with Vratislav Effenberger)	128
anti-essay 11: separation	136
Editorial Notes	138
Bibliography of Selected Works by Ivan Sviták	145