

Contents

Part I Introduction

1 Introduction	3
References.....	11

Part II Husserl's Transcendental Aesthetic

2 The Phenomenological Aesthetic	15
2.1 Husserl's Aesthetic Facing Empirio-Criticism.....	17
2.1.1 Pure Experience and the Concept of the World	17
2.1.2 Husserl's Reading of Avenarius	21
2.2 An Eidetic and Transcendental Theory of the Experienced World as Such	26
2.3 Conclusions.....	29
References.....	33
3 The Transcendental Aesthetic: Husserl and Kant	37
3.1 Husserl's Reading of Kant	38
3.1.1 Two Meanings of the Transcendental and the A Priori	40
3.1.2 Experience and Subjectivity.....	43
3.1.3 The Boundaries Between Aesthetic and Analytic	49
3.2 Sensibility and Stratifications: Between Kant and Husserl.....	52
3.2.1 Intuition: Form and Matter.....	56
3.2.2 Synthesis and the Unity before All Concepts.....	61
3.2.3 Chaos and Order in Sensibility	67
3.2.4 Da Capo: Experience and Subjectivity, between Wesen and Faktum	78
3.3 Conclusions.....	80
References.....	82

Part III Parallelisms, Stratifications, and Beyond

4	Intuitiveness, Constitution, and Idealization: Modes of Spatial and Temporal Experience	89
4.1	The Intuitiveness of Time.....	91
4.2	Space Between Intuition, Idealization, and Constitution.....	100
4.3	Conclusions.....	107
	References.....	108
5	The Thing of the Transcendental Aesthetic: Spatial and Temporal Constitution	111
5.1	Res Temporalis and Temporal Constitution	115
5.1.1	The Temporal Object and the Spreading-Out of the Now	117
5.1.2	The Phenomenological Reduction and Temporal Constitution	123
5.1.3	The Temporal Fringe and the Future.....	128
5.2	Res Extensa and Spatial Constitution	130
5.2.1	The Debate on the Origin of the Representation of Space.....	132
5.2.2	Space and the Spatial Thing	135
5.3	Conclusions.....	142
	References.....	144

Part IV Spatio-temporal Intertwining: The Dynamics of Experience

6	Individuation, Irreversibility, and the Spatio-temporal Intertwining	151
6.1	Individual and Meaning in the Phenomenological Theory of Knowledge.....	152
6.2	Individuum in Formal Ontology.....	156
6.3	The Transcendental Aesthetic and Spatio-temporal Individuation	160
6.4	Individuation and Subjectivity	170
6.5	Conclusions.....	177
	References.....	178
7	Perspectival Givenness	181
7.1	Spatial and Temporal Perspective. Parallelism or Intertwining?.....	182
7.1.1	The Perspectival Givenness of the Spatial Thing	182
7.1.2	Abklangsphänomen and Temporal Perspective.....	186
7.1.3	Affective Perspective.....	194
7.1.4	Interconnections: Perspective, Proximity, and Remoteness.....	197

7.2	Perspectival Givenness and Intentionality	199
7.2.1	The Givenness of the Hidden Profiles	200
7.2.2	Tendency and the Process of Fulfillment	204
7.2.3	Temporal Constitution and the Process of Fulfillment	209
7.3	Modes of Teleology	212
7.3.1	The Teleology of Perception: Optimum and Adequateness	213
7.3.2	Intentionality as Tendency and Its Teleology	224
7.3.3	Teleology and Inner Time Consciousness	233
7.4	Conclusions	240
	References	241
8	The Transcendental Aesthetic and the Lived-Body	247
8.1	Situational Spatio-temporality of the Body as Organ of Perception	250
8.1.1	The Body as Zero-Point of Orientation	252
8.1.2	Psycho-physical Conditionality and Ortho-aesthetic	265
8.1.3	Situatedness and Bodily Movement	273
8.2	The Aesthetic of the Lived-Body	279
8.2.1	Sensitivity	280
8.2.2	Movement and Bodily Consciousness	285
8.2.3	Body Memory	294
8.3	Conclusions	308
	References	309
Part V Conclusions
9	Conclusions	317
	References	322
	References	323
	Edmund Husserl	323
	Husserliana Edmund Husserl Gesammelte Werke	323
	Husserliana Materialien	325
	Other Editions of Husserl's Texts	325
	Unpublished Manuscripts	326
	A-Manuscripts Mundane Phänomenologie	326
	D-Manuscripts	326
	English Translations	327
	Immanuel Kant	328
	English Translations	328
	Other Literature	329
	Index	345