

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
1 REFERENCE AND NONEXISTENCE IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY	1
Solutions and Strategies	3
Elimination by Paraphrase: The Theory of Descriptions	22
2 REFERENCE AND FICTION	31
Reference as Identification	32
Objects and Existence	39
Is Reference to Nonexistent Objects Only Pretended? Searle, Walton, and Evans	45
3 THE UNREALITY OF FICCTIONS	53
Objects and the Structure of Reference	54
Frameworks and Types of Object	57
Fictions as a Conceptual Type	59
Fictions as Unreal	63
Kripke on Fictions as Nonexistent	70
Objections and Replies	72
Is Ordinary Thought Meinongian?	76
4 FICTIONAL DISCOURSE	78
The Origins of Nonexistent Objects: Storytelling	80
Constructing, Reporting, and Commenting on Fiction	90
Two Puzzling Cases	98

5	ALTERNATIVE REFERENTIAL THEORIES OF FICTION	106
	Van Inwagen: Fictions as Theoretical Entities	107
	Parsons's Quinean Meinongianism and the Methodology of Nonexistence	112
	Are There Really Nonexistent Objects?	124
6	REAL THINGS IN FICTION, LOGICAL COMPLETENESS, AND OTHER FORMS OF REPRESENTATION	129
	Are Stories about Real Things?	129
	Are Fictional Characters Logically Complete?	138
	Objects in Myths, Dreams, and Nonrealistic Fiction	148
7	IS EVERYTHING FICTITIOUS?	158
	How Do I Know That I Am Not a Fictional Character?	159
	Everything Is Fictional: The Metaphysical Thesis	163
	Ethical Attitudes toward Reality as a Construct	168
	Index	175