

Contents

Preface	xi
Introduction: Defining the Question	1
1. What are concepts?	2
2. Philosophers versus psychologists	10
3. My theses	13
4. Some disclaimers	14
Chapter 1: The Lockean Theory	17
1. The composition theory	19
2. Abstraction-as-subtraction	24
3. Abstraction-as-representation	28
4. Concepts as the building blocks of judgments	31
5. Contemporary Lockeans	33
5.1 A recent version of the composition theory: Rosch	33
5.2 A contemporary version of abstraction-as-subtraction: Mandler	36
5.3 A contemporary version of abstraction-as-representation: Prinz	40
6. A collection of problems	45
Appendix: Locke as trope theorist	46
Chapter 2: The Kantian Theory	50
1. Kant's own theory	50
2. Evidence for this interpretation	53
3. Why we cannot be Kantians today	56

4. Are concepts embedded in perception?	59
5. A Kantian in contemporary psychology: Barsalou	65
6. A Kantian in contemporary philosophy: McDowell	70
6.1 McDowell's Kant interpretation	71
6.2 McDowell on the justification of belief through perception	75
7. The lessons	79
Appendix: Analysis as the representation of synthesis	79
 Chapter 3: Regions of Similarity Space	 86
1. Churchland and Gärdénfors	89
2. Is the theory inevitable?	93
3. An empirical challenge	96
4. Why judgments cannot be built from regions	99
4.1 Learning about individuals	100
4.2 Learning about kinds	102
4.3 Modal distinctions	105
4.4 Learning through language	106
4.5 Complex logical structures	107
5. Thought without boundaries	109
 Chapter 4: The Sellarsian Theory	 112
1. Sellars's functionalism	113
2. The myth of Jones	122
3. Perception	130
4. Right-wing Sellarsianism: Fodor	134
5. Left-wing Sellarsianism: Brandom	138
 Chapter 5: Imagistic Cognition	 145
1. What are mental images?	147
2. Feats of imagination	149
3. The analysis of imagistic cognition	151
3.1 Perceptual similarity space	151
3.2 Object tracking	155

3.3	Acquired dimensions of perceptual similarity space	157
3.4	Imagistic causation	161
4.	Animals and babies	163
4.1	A brief review of some of the challenges	164
4.2	Quinn's studies of human infants	171
4.3	Savage-Rumbaugh's studies of chimpanzees	174
Chapter 6: Similarity without Concepts		184
1.	Some specious objections	185
2.	Similarity and commonality	187
3.	Imagistic representation	192
3.1	Mere misperception	194
3.2	Persistent illusions	200
3.3	The correspondence between dimensions	203
4.	Contra Tversky	206
4.1	The empirical results	207
4.2	The contrast model	209
4.3	Gleitman's better explanation	211
4.4	The remaining results	215
Chapter 7: Cooperation by Means of Words		217
1.	The paradigm case	221
2.	Some further assumptions	224
2.1	Goals	224
2.2	Varieties of imagistic representations	225
2.3	The composition of similarities	227
2.4	Counting demonstratives	228
3.	Production and acceptance of literals	231
3.1	Production of atomic sentences	232
3.2	Acceptance of atomic sentences	237
3.3	Negations of atomic sentences	239
3.4	The activation of speech dispositions	242
3.5	An interlocutor's take on the context	243
4.	Disjunctions	245
5.	General negation	248
6.	Psychologic	249

7. Conditionals	250
8. Universal quantifiers	253
Chapter 8: Thinking in Language	256
1. What is inner speech?	257
1.1 Conceptual thoughts and verbal imagery	257
1.2 Consciousness of verbal imagery	259
1.3 Sentences in thought	260
1.4 Beliefs versus occurrent thoughts	263
2. Easy answers to cheap shots	265
3. The utility of intrapersonal discourse	273
4. Semantic norms	277
References	285
Index	299