
Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: To Classify Is Human 1

1

Some Tricks of the Trade in Analyzing Classification 33

I

Classification and Large-Scale Infrastructures 51

2

The Kindness of Strangers: Kinds and Politics in Classification Systems 53

3

The ICD as Information Infrastructure 107

4

Classification, Coding, and Coordination 135

II

Classification and Biography, or System and Suffering 163

5

Of Tuberculosis and Trajectories 165

6

The Case of Race Classification and Reclassification under Apartheid 195

III

Classification and Work Practice 227

7

*What a Difference a Name Makes—the Classification of Nursing
Work* 229

8

Organizational Forgetting, Nursing Knowledge, and Classification 255

IV

The Theory and Practice of Classifications 283

9

Categorical Work and Boundary Infrastructures: Enriching Theories of Classification 285

10

Why Classifications Matter 319

Notes 327

References 335

Name Index 367

Subject Index 373