1	Preliminary remarks	1
1.1	Types and propositions	1
1.2	Judgements and contexts	2
1.3	Constructive and classical logic	3
1.4	Background in constructive semantics	4
1.5	Grammatical form in natural language	4
1.6	Syntax and semantics	6
1.7	Generation, parsing, and sugaring	7
1.8	Formalization and sugaring in informal grammar	9
1.9	Notation for functions and patterns	11
1.10	Notation for grammatical rules	13
2	Gradual introduction to type theory	17
2.1	Predicate calculus as a meaningful formalism	18
2.2	Domains of individuals	18
2.3	Functions	21
2.4	Propositions and propositional functions	22
2.5	Polymorphism and overloading	23
2.6	Connectives and quantifiers	24
2.7	Assertions	25
2.8	Rules of the explicit predicate calculus	27
2.9	Examples of proofs	31
2.10	Intuitionistic and classical logic	32
2.11	Substantival and adjectival terms	32
2.12	Separated subsets	34
2.13	Families of sets	36
2.14	The classical notion of proposition	37
2.15	The intuitionistic notion of proposition	38
2.16	The propositions as types principle	39
2.17	Logic in type theory	42
2.18	Existential quantification	43
2.19	Universal quantification and implication	45
2.20	Disjunction	46
2.21	Absurdity and negation	47
2.22	Examples of proofs in type theory	48
2.23	Finite sets, truth values	49
2.24	Natural numbers	50

2.25	Equality propositions	52
2.26	Non-mathematical propositions	53
2.27	Semantic explanations in type theory	56
3	Logical operators in English	59
3.1	Quantifiers	59
3.2	Ordering principles	60
3.3	Separated subsets	61
3.4	Conjunction and implication	65
3.5	Sugarings of Σ and Π	67
3.6	Nominalization	69
3.7	Reference to proofs of Π propositions	70
3.8	Disjunction	73
3.9	Negation	74
4	Anaphoric expressions	77
4.1	A pronoun may refer to any object	77
4.2	The pronominalization rule	78
4.3	Definite noun phrases	81
4.4	Modified definite phrases	82
4.5	Some uses of the genitive	83
4.6	Nested anaphoric expressions	86
4.7	The spectrum of anaphoric expressions	86
4.8	The type matching of an interpretation	88
4.9	What is given in context	89
4.10	Actual and potential in context	91
4.11	The zero sign	93
4.12	Presupposition	95
4.13	Discourse referents	96
4.14	Indexical expressions	98
5	Temporal reference	101
5.1	Time scales	102
5.2	Appropriate accuracy	104
5.3	Existential and indexical ellipsis of time	105
5.4	Complementary and adjunctive time adverbials	106
5.5	Anaphoric expressions of time	109
5.6	Examples of time anaphora	111
5.7	The perfect	112
5.8	Aspectual systems	114
5.9	Past, present, and future	118
5.10	A synoptic table of tenses	122
6	Text and discourse	125
6.1	Text as a progressive conjunction	125

6.2	Text as a context	126
6.3	Pure text	127
6.4	Forward reference	128
6.5	Background hypotheses	129
6.6	The general form of a text	131
6.7	Background hypotheses and style	133
6.8	Contexts with definitions	134
6.9	Proper names in fiction	135
6.10	The interpretations of a text	135
6.11	Propositional questions	137
6.12	Fairness in a dialogue	139
6.13	Wh-questions	140
6.14	Questions and answers in a dialogue	141
7	Contexts and possible worlds	145
7.1	The extensions of a context	145
7.2	Some notions of possible worlds semantics	147
7.3	Worlds of fiction	150
7.4	Judgement, knowledge, and belief	151
7.5	Belief contexts	153
7.6	The belief operator	154
7.7	Anaphoric reference to believed objects	156
7.8	Intentional identity for distinct agents	157
8	Higher-level type theory	161
8.1	Types	161
8.2	Lower-level type theory	162
8.3	Abstraction and conversions	166
8.4	An example of a proof	167
8.5	Simple type theory	167
8.6	Categorial grammars	168
8.7	Progressively typed verbs	170
8.8	English logical operators	171
8.9	Anaphoric expressions and tenses	171
8.10	Categorial grammar and sugaring	173
8.11	Compositional sugaring	175
9	Sugaring and parsing	179
9.1	The notation of ALF	180
9.2	Two stages of sugaring	182
9.3	Functional phrase structure	183
9.4	Ambiguation	184
9.5	Tree notation	187
9.6	Examples of sugaring	191

9.7	Parsing	193
9.8	The interpretation of anaphoric expressions	195
9.9	Conditions of sugarability	198
9.10	Applications of sugaring and parsing	201
