

CONTENTS

TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE vii

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS xiii

PREFACE TO THE GERMAN EDITION xv

INTRODUCTION xvii

CHAPTER I: Fundamental Phenomenological Considerations 1

I.1. Preliminary remarks 1

I.2. Epochē and reduction 2

I.3. Phenomenology and idealism 13

I.4. The problem of intersubjectivity 16

I.5. Schutz and mundane intersubjectivity 22

CHAPTER II: Husserl's Phenomenology of Intersubjectivity 25

II.1. World and primordiality 25

II.2. Immanence and transcendence 29

II.3. The performance of others 33

II.4. Horizon and intersubjectivity 39

II.5. Two types of relation to others 52

CHAPTER III: Intersubjective Subjectivity 62

III.1. The community of monads 62

III.2. Unity and plurality 65

III.3. The uniqueness of the primal I 77

CHAPTER IV: The Transcendental Consequences 85

IV.1. The possibility of dissent 85

IV.2. Normality and objectivity 86

IV.3. Historicity and generativity 98

CHAPTER V:	A New Characterization of Phenomenology	105
	V.1. Beyond idealism and realism	105
	V.2. Meta-phenomenology	121
CHAPTER VI:	The Further Development of the Phenomenological Theory of Intersubjectivity	123
	VI.1. Homogeneity and perspectivization	123
	VI.2. Heidegger—Da-sein's being-with	124
	VI.3. Sartre—the transcendence of the other	137
	VI.4. Merleau-Ponty—finitude and openness	149
	VI.5. I, we, and world: a systematic summary	159
Chapter VII:	Phenomenology and the Pragmatics of Language	167
	VII.1. The linguistic-pragmatic challenge	167
	VII.2. Apel's fundamental theses	168
	VII.3. Habermas's critique	178
	A. Introspective evidence and linguistic consensus	178
	B. Self-consciousness and intersubjectivity	185
	VII.4. A phenomenological rejoinder	188
	VII.5. Conclusion	205
ABBREVIATIONS		207
NOTES		209
REFERENCES		247
1.	WORKS OF HUSSERL	247
A.	UNPUBLISHED MANUSCRIPTS	247
B.	HUSSERLIANA	248
C.	OTHER WORKS	250
2.	WORKS OF OTHER AUTHORS	250
INDEX OF NAMES		271