

Contents

Introduction by James Conant	xi
I. The Return of Aristotle
1. How Old Is the Mind?	3
2. Changing Aristotle's Mind (with Martha C. Nussbaum)	22
3. Aristotle after Wittgenstein	62
II. The Legacy of Logical Positivism
4. Logical Positivism and Intentionality	85
5. Reichenbach's Metaphysical Picture	99
6. Reichenbach and the Myth of the Given	115
7. Reichenbach and the Limits of Vindication	131
III. The Inheritance of Pragmatism
8. Pragmatism and Moral Objectivity	151
9. Pragmatism and Relativism: Universal Values and Traditional Ways of Life	182
10. Dewey's Logic : Epistemology as Hypothesis (with Ruth Anna Putnam)	198
11. Education for Democracy (with Ruth Anna Putnam)	221
IV. Essays after Wittgenstein
12. Rethinking Mathematical Necessity	245
13. Does the Disquotational Theory of Truth Solve All Philosophical Problems?	264
14. Realism without Absolutes	279
15. The Question of Realism	295
V. Truth and Reference
16. On Truth	315

17. A Comparison of Something with Something Else 330
18. Model Theory and the “Factuality” of Semantics 351
19. Probability and the Mental 376

VI. Mind and Language

20. Artificial Intelligence: Much Ado about Not
Very Much 391
21. Models and Modules: Fodor’s *The Modularity
of Mind* 403
22. Reflexive Reflections 416
23. Reductionism and the Nature of Psychology 428
24. Why Functionalism Didn’t Work 441

VII. The Diversity of the Sciences

25. The Diversity of the Sciences 463
26. The Idea of Science 481
27. Three Kinds of Scientific Realism 492
28. Philosophy of Mathematics: Why Nothing Works 499
29. The Cultural Impact of Newton: Pope’s Essay on Man and
Those “Happy Pieties” 513

Credits 523

Index 527