Preface	x
1 Contingentism and Necessitism	I
1.1 The question	I
1.2 Forms of necessitism	5
1.3 Possible Fs	10
1.4 Unrestricted generality	14
1.5 Necessitism and Meinongianism	18
1.6 Actualism and possibilism	22
1.7 Identity and distinctness	25
1.8 Dying and never being born	28
2 The Barcan Formula and its Converse: Early Developments	30
2.1 The Barcan Formula	30
2.2 The Converse Barcan Formula	37
2.3 Ibn-Sina	45
2.4 Carnap	46
2.5 Barcan Marcus again	60
2.6 Prior	64
2.7 Truth-value gaps	72
2.8 Logical modalities	75
3 Possible Worlds Model Theory	81
3.1 Kripke	81
3.2 Kripke models for normal propositional modal logic	84
3.3 Metaphysical universality in propositional modal logic	92
3.4 Kripke models for first-order modal logic	119
3.5 The Barcan and converse Barcan formulas in Kripke's model theory	124
3.6 Metaphysical universality in first-order modal logic	130
3.7 Intended inhabited model structures for necessitism	139

4	Predication and Modality	148
4.1	The being constraint	148
4.2	Stalnaker's quantified modal logic with identity: orthodox semantics	159
4.3	Stalnaker's quantified modal logic with identity: unorthodox semantics	163
4.4	The significance of Stalnaker's results	167
4.5	Abstraction and the qualified converse Barcan formula	172
4.6	Variables and constants in Stalnaker's system	177
4.7	Abstraction and the necessity of distinctness	179
4.8	Abstraction and necessitism	183
4.9	Stalnaker's criterion of representational significance	188
5	From First-Order to Higher-Order Modal Logic	195
5.1	Methodological preliminaries	195
5.2	Lewis and Langford: propositional quantification in modal logic	198
5.3	Second-order modal logic in Barcan and Carnap: identity, individual concepts, and semantic uniformity	203
5.4	Montague's intensional logic	216
5.5	The system ML_p of higher-order modal logic	221
5.6	Necessitist and contingentist versions of ML_p	230
5.7	The challenge of interpreting higher-order quantification	235
5.8	Plural quantification in modal logic	241
5.9	Non-plural interpretations of higher-order modal logic	254
6	Intensional Comprehension Principles and Metaphysics	262
6.1	Comprehension and higher-order necessitism	262
6.2	Individuals and their haecceities	267
6.3	Non-modal comprehension	277
6.4	Non-singular comprehension	282
6.5	From properties to propositions	288
6.6	Truth in a world and truth of a world	296
6.7	Appendix	301
7	Mappings between Contingentist and Necessitist Discourse	305
7.1	Communication between contingentists and necessitists	305
7.2	Mapping contingentist talk to neutral talk	313
7.3	Mapping necessitist talk to neutral talk	323
7.4	Modalism and anti-modalism	332

7.5	The problem of impossibles	335
7.6	Extending the framework to plurals	340
7.7	Infinitary languages	352
7.8	Further applications	365
7.9	Appendix	369
8	Consequences of Necessitism	376
8.1	The necessary framework of objects	376
8.2	Supervenience in question	380
8.3	No truthmakers	391
8.4	Contingency, change, and difference	403
	Methodological Afterword	423
	Bibliography	430
	Index	451
