

Acknowledgements	xi
A note on editions of Wittgenstein's work	xiii
Abbreviations	xv
Chronology	xvii

Life and works One 1

1. Introduction	1
2. Background and Early Life	2
3. 1911–19: Cambridge, the First World War, and the Tractatus	4
4. 1919–28: Retreat	7
5. 1929–47: Return to Philosophy – Cambridge, the Second World War, and Philosophical Investigations	11
6. 1947–51: Final Years	16
7. Plan for the Book	17
Summary	20
Further Reading	21

The Tractatus: language and logic Two 23

1. Representation	24
2. Analysis and Logic	35
Summary	45
Further Reading	46

The Tractatus: reality and the limits of language Three 47

1. Reality	47
2. The Limits of Language	60
Summary	72
Further Reading	73

From the Tractatus to Philosophical Investigations Four 75

1. From Logical Analysis to Surveyable Representation	75
---	----

2. 'The Diversity of Kinds of Word and Sentence': Wittgenstein's Rejection of Referentialism	87
3. Meaning and Use	95
Summary	104
Further Reading	105

The later philosophy: intentionality and rule-following Five 106

1. Intentionality	107
2. Rules and Rule-Following	121
Summary	146
Further Reading	147

The later philosophy: mind and psychology Six 149

1. Sensations and Sensation Language	149
2. Themes in the Philosophy of Psychology	175
Summary	187
Further Reading	188

Knowledge and certainty Seven 191

1. Moore's 'Proof of an External World'	192
2. Moorean Propositions	195
3. Moorean Propositions as Rules of Enquiry	203
4. The Threat of Relativism	207
Summary	212
Further Reading	213

Religion and anthropology Eight 215

1. Religion	215
2. Anthropology	229
Summary	240
Further Reading	241

	Legacy and influence	Nine	243
1.	The Tractatus and Contemporary Philosophy		245
2.	Wittgenstein's Later Work and Contemporary Philosophy		246
3.	Wittgenstein's Conception of Philosophy		255
	Summary		257
	Further Reading		258
		Glossary	259
		Bibliography	268
		Index	274