

Contents

Preface ix

1 Introduction 1

1.1 Wonder and Intelligibility 1

1.2 Intelligibility and Philosophy 5

1.3 The Distraction of (Reductive) Physicalism 10

1.4 How to Ignore Physicalism 16

1.5 The Intelligibility of Consciousness: A First Step 24

2 The Intelligibility of Consciousness I: How Experience Relates Us to the World 29

2.1 The Intrinsic Nature of Experience 29

2.2 The Intelligible Relations between Observable Properties and Phenomenal Properties 38

2.3 How Observable Properties Intelligibly Explain Phenomenal Properties 53

2.4 How Observable Properties Are Intelligibly Similar to Phenomenal Properties 61

2.5 How Consciousness Reveals the External World to Us: A First Step 65

3 The Intelligibility of Consciousness II: The Causal Powers of Conscious States 71

3.1	The Idea of Intelligible Causation	71
3.2	Motivating the Idea of Intelligible Causation	75
3.3	The Intelligible Causal Powers of Experiences	85
3.4	The Intelligible Causal Powers of Beliefs: Inference	99
3.5	The Intelligible Causal Powers of Rational Intuitions: Reflection	103
3.6	Intelligible Causation and Introspection	106
4	The Importance of Consciousness I: Belief, Rationality, and Knowledge	111
4.1	Consciousness and Rationality	111
4.2	Rationality and Reasoning	116
4.3	Some Applications of the Theory of Rationality	118
4.4	Two Kinds of Rationality	122
4.5	Justification, Rationality, and Intelligible Causation	129
4.6	The Unity of Knowledge	135
5	The Importance of Consciousness II: Desire, Feeling, and Value	141
5.1	Desire, Rational Desire, and Value	141
5.2	Two Kinds of Rational Desires	147
5.3	Bodily Sensations: Pleasures and Pains	156
5.4	Feelings	166
5.5	Ideal Desires: Consciousness and Value	179
6	The Wonder of Consciousness: Conclusions	185
	Notes	189
	References	215
	Index	227