

Contents

Acknowledgements ix

Introduction xi

- 1 Phenomenal Consciousness 1
  - 1.1 Preliminary Remarks 2
  - 1.2 Phenomenal Consciousness and Self-Representation 4
  - 1.3 The Connection between Phenomenal Consciousness and Creature Consciousness 8
  - 1.4 Consciousness of Things 10
  - 1.5 Real-World Puzzle Cases 18

- 2 Why Consciousness Cannot Be Physical and Why It Must Be 25
  - 2.1 What Is the Thesis of Physicalism? 25
  - 2.2 Why Consciousness Cannot Be Physical 29
  - 2.3 Why Consciousness Must Be Physical 33

- 3 Physicalism and the Appeal to Phenomenal Concepts 39
  - 3.1 Some Terminological Points 39
  - 3.2 Why Physicalists Appeal to Phenomenal Concepts 42
  - 3.3 Various Accounts of Phenomenal Concepts 44
  - 3.4 My Earlier View on Phenomenal Concepts 51
  - 3.5 Are There Any Phenomenal Concepts? 56
  - 3.6 Phenomenal Concepts and Burgean Intuitions 63
  - 3.7 Consequences for A Priori Physicalism 74

- 4 The Admissible Contents of Visual Experience 77
  - 4.1 The Existential Thesis 78
  - 4.2 The Singular (When Filled) Thesis 80
  - 4.3 Kaplanianism 83
  - 4.4 The Multiple-Contents Thesis 86
  - 4.5 The Existential Thesis Revisited 88
  - 4.6 Still More on Existential Contents 91
  - 4.7 Conclusion 94

5	Consciousness, Seeing, and Knowing	95
5.1	Knowing Things and Knowing Facts	95
5.2	Nonconceptual Content	103
5.3	Why the Phenomenal Character of an Experience Is Not One of Its Nonrepresentational Properties	109
5.4	Phenomenal Character and Representational Content: Part I	112
5.5	Phenomenal Character and Representational Content: Part II	115
5.6	Phenomenal Character and Our Knowledge of It	116
6	Solving the Puzzles	123
6.1	Mary, Mary, How Does Your Knowledge Grow?	123
6.2	The Explanatory Gap	133
6.3	The Hard Problem	144
6.4	The Possibility of Zombies	145
7	Change Blindness and the Refrigerator Light Illusion	155
7.1	A Closer Look at the Change-Blindness Hypotheses	158
7.2	The “No-See-Um” View	164
7.3	Sperling and the Refrigerator Light	168
7.4	Phenomenology and Cognitive Accessibility	171
7.5	A Further Change-Blindness Experiment	174
7.6	Another Brick in the Wall	176
8	Privileged Access, Phenomenal Character, and Externalism	183
8.1	The Threat to Privileged Access	183
8.2	A Burgean Thought Experiment	185
8.3	Social Externalism for Phenomenal Character?	187
8.4	A Closer Look at Privileged Access and Incorrigeability	188
8.5	How Do I Know That I Am Not a Zombie?	191
8.6	Phenomenal Externalism	193
	Notes	201
	References	217
	Index	227