

CONTENTS

Illustrations	ix
A Note to the Reader	xi
Preface	xv

PART ONE

The Neurophysiological Imagination	I
1. Ecstatic Science: Natural History of the Soul	3
2. Beyond Organic Form: Gertrude Stein and Johns Hopkins Neuroanatomy	51

PART TWO

The New Organism	119
Introduction: Irresistible Dictation	121
3. Line of Divergence: Emerson and Stein	129
4. At the Whiteheads': Science and the Modern World	165

PART THREE

Stein and William James	207
Introduction: The Will to Live	209
5. Writing Psychology Over: Toward a More Radical Empiricism	214
6. Every Field Incomplete: Mapping "The Very Abysses of Our Nature"	241
7. "The Physiognomy of the Thing": Sentences and Paragraphs in Stein and Wittgenstein	268

8. Conclusion: “Sentences Singing Themselves”	291
Coda in Three Voices	328
Notes	331
Works Cited	401
Index	431