Contents

Acknowledgments ix
  1. Introduction: The Universal and the Particular 1
Part I. General Considerations 11
  2. A Philosophical Perspective on the Concept of Human Communication 13
  3. Are There Cultural Universals? 21
  4. The Biological Foundation of Universal Norms 34
Part II. Religion and Morality 43
  5. Universalism and Particularism in Religion from an African Perspective 45
Part III. Conceptual Contrasts 79
  7. Formulating Modern Thought in African Languages: Some Theoretical Considerations 81
  8. The Concept of Truth in the Akan Language 105
  9. African Philosophical Tradition: A Case Study of the Akan 113
  10. The Need for Conceptual Decolonization in African Philosophy 136
  11. Post-Colonial African Philosophy 145
Part IV. Democracy and Human Rights 155
  12. An Akan Perspective on Human Rights 157
  13. Philosophy and the Political Problem of Human Rights 172
  15. Postscript: Reflections on Some Reactions 191
Notes 211
Index 231