

CHAP.	PAGE
IV. RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHICAL IDEALISM . . .	113
I. Main Types of Idealism : (1) Ancient ; (2) Modern—(a) Pluralistic, (b) Monistic . . .	117
II. Platonic Idealism	124
III. Absolute Idealism. From Hegel to Croce . . .	127
IV. Pluralistic Idealism : Berkeley, Leibniz . . .	141
 V. THE STRUCTURE OF THE UNIVERSE AND THE OBJECT- TIVITY OF VALUES	155
I. The Universe as a Hierarchy of Grades and Values	157
II. The Argument from Human Values to the Nature of Ultimate Reality	172
III. The Application of the Argument to the Specific Values : Goodness, Truth, Beauty, Holiness . . .	183
IV. The Relation of the World of Values to the World of Facts	193
 VI. THE CHRISTIAN CONCEPTION OF GOD. Part I. Primary Affirmations.	203
I. Christian Theism. God mirrored in Christ . . .	205
II. The Fatherhood of God	210
III. The Sovereignty (Kingdom) of God	221
IV. God the " Most High " (Transcendence) . . .	227
 VII. THE CHRISTIAN CONCEPTION OF GOD. Part II. Implications and Amplifications	235
I. The Personality of God	237
II. God as Creator	250
III. God and the Providential Order	254
IV. The Metaphysical Attributes of God, as : (1) Eternal ; (2) Omnipotent and Omni- present ; (3) Omniscient	262
 VIII. THE DOCTRINE OF THE PERSON OF CHRIST . . .	277
I. From Anthropomorphism to Christomorphism. Christianity is Theocentric	279
II. " Universal " and " Particular " Incarnation . . .	284
III. Christ in the New Testament	297

CONTENTS

XV

CHAP.		PAGE
IX.	THE DOCTRINE OF THE PERSON OF CHRIST— continued	299
	I. The Problem of the Relation of Christ to the Godhead	301
	II. The Problem of the Relation of the Divine and the Human in Christ	309
	III. A Constructive Restatement : The Inductive Method	322
X.	THE DOCTRINE OF THE TRINITY	335
	I. The Place of the Doctrine of the Trinity in Christian Theology	337
	II. A Critical Review of the History of the Dogma	339
	III. Its Difficulties as a via media between Modalism and Tritheism	345
	IV. Its Religious Essence and Metaphysical Ac- cretions	349
 INDEXES :
	I. Persons	361
	II. Subjects	364