

CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGES
I. INTRODUCTORY	I-8

The general purpose of the book. Relation between the "flashes of insight" and the general ideas of a philosophical scheme such as Whitehead's. The meaning of "rationalism" in contemporary philosophy. Speculative metaphysics, or the solving of detached problems? The dilemma of the modern metaphysician. Rival claims of the complexity of the subject-matter and the aim towards clarity.

II. WHITEHEAD'S DEFENCE OF RATIONALISM	9-41
--	------

The need for a constructive metaphysic. The Function of Reason. The Practical and the Speculative Reason. Requirements of a philosophical scheme. Value of such schemes. The methodology of metaphysics. Descriptive generalisation. Dangers and limitations of systematic philosophy. Philosophy "the self-correction of subjective over-emphasis." Whitehead's method in setting out his categorical scheme. Note on his terminology.

III. SOME CHALLENGES TO "THE SENTIMENT OF RATIONALITY"	42-68
--	-------

Has Whitehead faced the problem set by the Critical Philosophy with regard to the possibility of pure metaphysics? His "Cartesianism." The order in experience and the order in things. A possible interpretation of the Categories of the Understanding in the context of his Philosophy of Organism. An act of experience as a construction. Relation of thought and reality as primarily a problem of the relation of the logical structure of the symbolism constructed by Mind to the formal-structure of the real. The Platonic tradition of an objective λόγος in things versus the anti-intellectualism of Bradley, Bergson and Croce. The problem of the application of relational thought to the concrete real seen as that of the analysis of factors within fact. Rationalism and contemporary life. The distrust and the desire for general ideas.

IV. SOME PRIMARY NOTIONS OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF ORGANISM - - - - 69-101

The Categorical Scheme. The Category of the Ultimate. Actual entities and events. The concept of Process. The Ontological Principle. "Vacuous actuality" and the notion of Existence. Subjective aim and "real internal constitution." Prehensions. The two ways of understanding an actual entity. The concept of Organism.

V. ARE THE ETERNAL OBJECTS PLATONIC IDEAS? 102-139

Interpretation of the term "Platonism." The search for the forms in the facts. Relativism. Permanence and Flux. Objects and events. Repetition and periodicity in nature. Eternal objects as "forms of definiteness." Actuality a limitation amid alternative possibilities. Metaphysical status of these relevant possibilities. The Primordial Nature of God. Difficulty in using the name "God" in this connection. Abstractive hierarchies. Subjective and objective eternal objects. Comparison with some discussions in the Sophist.

VI. THE ORGANISATION OF FEELINGS - 140-173

An act of experience as a construction. Whitehead's philosophy "a critique of pure feeling." Does it involve a "pathetic fallacy"? The Categorical Obligations. Distinction between physical and conceptual feelings. Hybrid feelings. The transmission of feelings. Theory of Perception. Causal efficacy and Presentational Immediacy. Theory of Propositions, and Judgments. "Metaphysical propositions."

VII. CREATIVITY AND ORDER - - 174-219

Problem of the formal elements in concrete fact. Atomism and organism. Relation of atomic actual entities to organic nexūs; and to former view of objects and events. Cellular theory. Enduring objects; societies of actual entities. Order and novelty. The Extensive Continuum. Properties of Extensive Connection. The Method of Extensive Abstraction. Systematic uniformities as presuppositions of Induction and Measurement. Laws of nature. Morphology of evolution in types of order. "Living" organisms. The Order of Reason.

CHAPTER	PAGES
VIII. COSMIC, ETHICAL AND ÆSTHETIC ORDER IN THE "TIMÆUS" AND IN WHITEHEAD'S PHILO- SOPHY - - - -	220-241
A. E. Taylor's discussions of the analogy between Whitehead's cosmology and that of the Timæus. The emergence of a type of order. Creativity and the Matrix of Becoming. Relational views of Space and Time. Notion of becoming as involving organising forms of structure. Interpenetration of the rational. Bearing of concept of rational order on ethics and æsthetics. "Fitness" of the rational. Amor Intellectualis Dei.
IX. FINAL APPLICATIONS OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF OR- GANISM IN NATURAL THEOLOGY -	242-273
The difficulties of natural theology. Is there still a place for it? Religion and metaphysics. The possibility of rational religion. Creativity and the Primordial Nature of God. Comparison with Alexander's idea of Deity; and with the cosmology of the Christian Platonists of Alexandria. "Valuation" and "appetition" in God's Primordial Nature. The becoming of temporal actuality. Objective immortality and the loss of subjective immediacy. Fulfilment of temporal actuality in the Consequent Nature of God. The conservation of value. Intensity of order. Harmony and contrast. The problem of evil. Mutual obstructiveness of temporal actualities. The Divine Order.
X. CONCLUSION - - - -	274-282
INDEX OF PROPER NAMES - -	283-284
GENERAL INDEX - - -	285-289