

Contents

Preface xi

Part I. Anticipations: The Halle Period, 1886–1900

1. Toward a Philosophy of Mathematics 3
2. Beyond the Philosophie der Arithmetik 21
3. Breaking Through the Brentanian Circle 41
4. The Refutation of Psychologism and Pure Logic: Logical Investigations (1) 62
5. Theory of Meaning: Logical Investigations (2) 84
6. Husserl's Preliminary Formal Ontology: Logical Investigations (3) 110
7. Theory of Consciousness and Intentionality: Logical Investigations (4) 126
8. Phenomenology of Knowledge: Logical Investigations (5) 152
9. On the Unity of the Investigations: Logical Investigations (6):
Concluding Observations 173

*Part II. Breakthrough to Transcendental Phenomenology:
The Göttingen Period, 1901–1916*

10. From Logical Investigations to Ideas, 1901–1913 185
 11. Phenomenology and Theory of Knowledge Revisited 211
 12. Lectures on Theory of Meaning (1908) 224
 13. The Time-Consciousness Texts, 1893–1911 242
 14. Toward a Phenomenology of Intersubjectivity 278
 15. Lectures on Ethics and Theory of Values 288
 16. Phantasy, Picture-Consciousness, Memory, and Aesthetic
Consciousness 306
 17. Facts and Essence: Ideas I (1) 318
 18. Natural Standpoint and Epoché: Ideas I (2) 341
 19. Structure of Consciousness: Ideas I (3) 362
 20. Truth and Reason: Ideas I (4) 387
 21. Husserl's Conception of Philosophy 397
 22. The End of the Göttingen Period: On to the Black Forest 402
- Notes 405
- Index 437