

Contents

Abbreviations	xi
Preface to Second Edition: As my father, I have already died	xv
Preamble: Travels in Nihilon	1
(a) Philosophy begins in disappointment	2
(b) Pre-Nietzschean nihilism	4
(c) Nietzschean nihilism	8
(d) Responding to nihilism: five possibilities	11
(e) Heidegger's transformation of Nietzschean nihilism	15
(f) Heidegger contra Jünger	18
(g) Impossible redemption: Adorno on nihilism	21
(h) Learning how to die – the argument	29
Lecture 1: Il y a	35
(a) Reading Blanchot	35
(b) How is literature possible?	40
(c) Orpheus, or the law of desire	48
(d) Blanchot's genealogy of morals: exteriority as desire, exteriority as law	52
(e) Il y a – the origin of the artwork	56
(i) first slope – Hegel avec Sade	57
(ii) second slope – a fate worse than death	63
(iii) ambiguity – Blanchot's secret	71
(f) The (im)possibility of death – or, how would Blanchot read Blanchot if he were not Blanchot?	77
(g) Holding Levinas's hand to Blanchot's fire	85

Contents

(i) a dying future	85
(ii) atheist transcendence	89
Lecture 2: Unworking romanticism	99
(a) Our naïveté	99
(i) Kantian fragmentation	102
(ii) deepest naïveté – political romanticism	105
(iii) Hegel, Schlegel	110
(iv) romantic modernity	113
(b) Digression I: Imagination as resistance (Wallace Stevens)	114
(c) Romantic ambiguity	123
(i) the fragment	125
(ii) wit and irony	131
(iii) the non-romantic essence of romanticism	135
(d) Cavell's 'romanticism'	138
(i) the romanticization of everyday life	138
(ii) Emerson as the literary absolute	141
(e) Digression II: Why Stanley loves America and why we should too	147
(f) Cavell's romanticism	154
(i) I live my scepticism	155
(ii) Cavell's tragic wisdom	157
(iii) finiteness, limitedness	161
Lecture 3: Know happiness – on Beckett	165
(a) Beckett and philosophical interpretation	165
(b) The dredging machine (Derrida)	169
(c) The meaning of meaninglessness and the paradoxical task of interpretation (Adorno I)	172
(d) Hope against hope – the elevation of social criticism to the level of form (Adorno II)	181
(e) Nothing is funnier than unhappiness – Beckett's laughter (Adorno III)	184
(f) Storytime, time of death ( Molloy, Malone Dies )	188
(g) My old aporetics – the syntax of weakness ( The Unnameable )	195

Contents

(h) Who speaks? Not I (Blanchot)	202
(i) No happiness? (Cavell)	207
Lecture 4: The philosophical significance of a poem – on Wallace Stevens	215
Notes	237
Acknowledgements	270
Index	273