

Contents

Acknowledgments

page xi

Part I A critique of traditional Marxism

Chapter 1	Rethinking Marx's critique of capitalism	3
	Introduction	3
	The crisis of traditional Marxism	7
	Reconstructing a critical theory of modern society	15
	The Grundrisse : rethinking Marx's conception of capitalism and its overcoming	21
	The fundamental core of capitalism	24
	Capitalism, labor, and domination	29
	The contradiction of capitalism	34
	Social movements, subjectivity, and historical analysis	36
	Some present-day implications	39
Chapter 2	Presuppositions of traditional Marxism	43
	Value and labor	43
	Ricardo and Marx	49
	"Labor," wealth, and social constitution	58
	The critique of society from the standpoint of labor	64
	Labor and totality: Hegel and Marx	71
Chapter 3	The limits of traditional Marxism and the pessimistic turn of Critical Theory	84
	Critique and contradiction	87
	Friedrich Pollock and "the primacy of the political"	90
	Assumptions and dilemmas of Pollock's thesis	96
	Max Horkheimer's pessimistic turn	104

Part II Toward a reconstruction of the Marxian critique: the commodity

Chapter 4	Abstract labor	123
	Requirements of a categorial reinterpretation	123
	The historically determine character of the Marxian critique	127
	Historical specificity: value and price	130
	Historical specificity and immanent critique	138
	Abstract labor	144
	Abstract labor and social mediation	148
	Abstract labor and alienation	158
	Abstract labor and the fetish	166
	Social relations, labor and nature	171
	Labor and instrumental action	179
	Abstract and substantive totality	183
Chapter 5	Abstract time	186
	The magnitude of value	186
	Abstract time and social necessity	190
	Value and material wealth	193
	Abstract time	200
	Forms of social mediation and forms of consciousness	216
Chapter 6	Habermas's critique of Marx	226
	Habermas's early critique of Marx	227
	The Theory of Communicative Action and Marx	242

Part III Toward a reconstruction of the Marxian critique: capital

Chapter 7	Toward a theory of capital	263
	Money	264
	Capital	267
	The critique of bourgeois civil society	272
	The sphere of production	277
Chapter 8	The dialectic of labor and time	286
	The immanent dynamic	287
	Abstract time and historical time	291
	The dialectic of transformation and reconstitution	298

Contents

ix

Chapter 9	The trajectory of production	307
	Surplus value and "economic growth"	307
	Classes and the dynamic of capitalism	314
	Production and valorization	324
	Cooperation	326
	Manufacture	330
	Large-scale industry	336
	Substantive totality	349
	Capital	349
	The proletariat	355
	Contradiction and determinate negation	358
	Modes of universality	366
	The development of the social division of time	373
	Realms of necessity	378
Chapter 10	Concluding considerations	385
	Selected bibliography	401
	Index	413