

CONTENTS

---

Preface and acknowledgements	ix
I Introduction: everyday concepts and social reality	1
1 Preamble	1
2 The focus and thesis of this book	1
3 Social science and everyday concepts	3
4 Weber on everyday collectivity concepts	6
5 The everyday concept of a collectivity	8
6 Methodology	10
7 The main themes	12
8 Overview of chapters	14
II 'Social action' and the subject matter of social science	22
1 Introduction	22
2 Weber's account of 'social action'	24
3 The question of collectivities	34
4 Further considerations on Weber's concept	44
5 Conclusions	55
III Action, meaning, and the social	58
1 Introduction	58
2 The deep level of the discussion	64
3 Winch on rule-following	71
4 Kripke's Wittgenstein	100
5 The intentionalist programme	128
6 Group languages	132

Contents

IV	Social groups: a Simmelian view	146
	1 Introduction: Simmel's statement	146
	2 On Sharing in an action	154
	3 'We'	167
	4 Social Groups	204
V	After Durkheim: concerning collective belief	237
	1 Introduction	237
	2 Durkheim on social facts: some salient features of the Rules discussion	243
	3 Assessing accounts of collective beliefs: some tests	254
	4 The simple summative account	257
	5 A second summative account: adding common knowledge	260
	6 A third summative account: the group as cause	274
	7 A nonsummative account of collective belief	288
VI	Social convention	315
	1 Introduction	315
	2 David Lewis on convention	319
	3 Critique of Lewis (1): A flawless mechanism?	329
	4 Critique of Lewis (2): Lewis's conditions on convention	339
	5 Critique of Lewis (3): Lewis and the 'ought' of convention	349
	6 Critique of Lewis (4): conventions and collectivities	355
	7 Towards an account of social convention	367
	8 Social convention	373
VII	On social facts	408
	1 The structure of everyday collectivity concepts: summary of results	408
	2 'The actions of participating individual men'	417
	3 Concerning 'individualism' versus 'holism'	427
	4 A sketch of some further applications	436
	5 On social facts	441
	6 Afterword	445
	Notes	446
	Bibliography	496
	Index	505