

Masking Terror

How Women Contain Violence
in Southern Sri Lanka

Alex Argenti-Pillen

PENN

University of Pennsylvania Press
Philadelphia

Contents

List of Illustrations ix

Preface xi

A Note on Transliteration xv

1. Introduction: How Women Contain Violence 1

Part I: The Wild in Udahehagama

2. "Have some tea with a piece of Nirvana!": A Lifetime Under the Gaze of the Wild 21

3. "Even the wild spirits are afraid!": The Gaze of the Wild in Five Neighborhoods 42

Part II: Cautious Discourses About the Wild

4. "We can tell anything to the milk tree": Udahehagama Soundscapes 85

5. "Those and these things happened": Ambiguous Forms of Speech 102

6. "She said that he had said that . . .": The Use of Reported Speech 133

Part III: Agents of Discursive Change

7. "It wasn't like that when we were young": Civil War, National Mental Health NGOs, and the International Community of Trauma Specialists 159

viii Contents

8. The Power of Ambiguity 195

Notes 213

Bibliography 225

Index 235