Truth-Conditional Pragmatics

François Recanati

CLARENDON PRESS · OXFORD

Contents

Introduction 1

1. The old picture and the new 1
2. Free pragmatic processes 3
3. Alleged arguments against TCP: (1) Communication 6
4. Alleged arguments against TCP: (2) Systematicity 9
5. TCP vs Minimalism 12
6. Pre-propositional pragmatics 15
7. TCP as a form of Contextualism 17
8. Defining 'Radical Contextualism' 20
9. Unarticulated constituents 22
10. Overview and acknowledgments 24

1. Compositionality, Flexibility, and Context-Dependence 27

1. Two types of rule 27
2. Semantic flexibility 29
3. Standing meaning vs occasion meaning 32
4. Counterexamples 35
5. Context-dependence 37
6. Saturation and modulation 39
7. Compositionality and modulation 43
8. Is Contextualism a threat to compositionality? 46

2. Adjectives: A Case Study 49

1. Two dogmas 49
2. The intersectivity of relative adjectives 51
3. The relativity of intersective adjectives 53
4. Colour adjectives: saturation or modulation? 55
5. Gradable adjectives: modulation or saturation? 59
6. Absolute gradable adjectives 66
7. Coerced modulation: back to the intersectivity issue 70
8. Conclusion 73

3. Weather Reports 77

1. The unavailability of 'indefinite' readings for implicit arguments 77
2. Implicit arguments vs free enrichment 81
3. Four levels of analysis 87
4. Reinterpreting the weatherman example 95
5. Who is right? 102
6. Alternative pragmatic accounts 110
7. Conclusion 124

4. Pragmatics and Logical Form 127

1. Truth-conditional pragmatics 127
2. Free pragmatic processes: two interpretations 129
3. Logical form in relevance theory 133
4. How many systems, and how different? 136

5. Embedded Implicatures 143

1. Introduction 143
2. Generalized conversational implicatures: two conceptions 146
3. From pragmatics to semantics 152
4. Pragmatic implications of sub-locutionary acts? 158
5. 'Local' speech acts? 161
6. Embedded implicatures and free enrichment 165
7. Conclusion: default implicatures or free enrichment (or both)? 170

6. Indexicality and Context-Shift 181

1. Preliminaries 181
2. (Alleged) context-shifts in complex sentences 185
3. Pretending that the context is different from what it is 192
4. Two types of context and two types of context-shifting pretence 198
5. Perspective point vs utterance point 204
6. Shiftable indexicals 210

7. Open Quotation 219

1. Introduction 219
2. Quotations as pictures 221
3. Quotations as singular terms 228

4. Mixed quotation 237
5. Interpreting quotations: the pragmatic view 245
6. In defence of the pragmatic view 252
7. Conclusion 262

8. Open Quotation Revisited 269

1. The pragmatic view 269
2. Sub-clausal open quotation: a multi-level analysis 271
3. Interaction with semantic content: (1) free enrichment 276
4. Interaction with semantic content: (2) context-shift 279
5. Building the context-shift into the semantics 282
6. Echoicity 284
7. Mixed quotation: the cancellability issue 290
8. Cancellation or disambiguation? 295

References 303
Index of Names 317
Subject Index 321