

The Emotions

A philosophical introduction

Julien A. Deonna and Fabrice Teroni

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Preface	x
1 Homing in on the emotions	1
Phenomenology	1
Intentionality	3
Epistemology	6
Emotions within the affective domain	7
Conclusion	11
Questions and further readings	12
2 The diversity and unity of emotions	14
Positive and negative emotions	14
Conscious and unconscious emotions	16
Other distinctions	18
Basic emotions	18
Emotions: unity or diversity?	20
Unity regained	24
Conclusion	26
Questions and further readings	27
3 Emotions, beliefs, and desires	28
Emotions and beliefs	28
The mixed theory	29
The desire satisfaction/frustration approach	33
Conclusion	38
Questions and further readings	39
4 Introducing values	40
Emotions and values	40
Subjectivism about values	42

	Fitting attitude analyses	44
	Forms of value realism	49
	Conclusion	50
	Questions and further readings	50
5	Emotions as value judgments	52
	The evaluative judgment theory	52
	The add-on strategy	56
	Emotions as constructions	58
	Conclusion	61
	Questions and further readings	61
6	Perceptual theories of the emotions	63
	James's theory	63
	Emotions as direct perceptions of values	66
	Emotions as indirect perceptions of values	71
	Conclusion	74
	Questions and further readings	75
7	The attitudinal theory of emotions	76
	Attitudes and contents	76
	Emotions as felt bodily attitudes	78
	Virtues of the theory	82
	Intentionality and phenomenology	85
	Conclusion	89
	Questions and further readings	89
8	Emotions and their justification	91
	Why-questions: perceptions vs. emotions	92
	Value judgments and value intuitions	93
	Back to why-questions	95
	Justified emotions	96
	Bridging the gaps	98
	Conclusion	101
	Questions and further readings	102
9	The nature and role of affective explanations	104
	Moods and temperaments	105
	Character traits and sentiments	106
	Desires	110
	Limits on the negative epistemological role of motivational states	112

A positive epistemological role for motivational states?	113
Conclusion	115
Questions and further readings	116
10 The importance of emotions	118
From justified emotions to justified evaluative judgments	118
Emotions and emotional sensitivity	121
Emotions and understanding	122
Conclusion	124
Questions and further readings	124
Bibliography	126
Index	134