PREFACE	vii
1. A LOGIC OF ACTION
1.1. The logic of action in the form of a system L_1 obtained by extending first-order predicate logic in a certain way	1
1.2. L_1 and the logic of performances	3
1.3. On a possibility of refining the proposed readings of statements of L_1	6
1.4. L_1 and forbearances	7
1.5. On some limitations of L_1	8
1.6. The semantics of L_1	9
1.7. The relation of L_1 to some systems of modal logic	11
1.8. A collection of statements which are valid in L_1	14
2. INFLUENCE RELATIONS
2.1. Introduction	17
2.2. Control, influence, and the interrelations of the simple types of influence	17
2.3. Exhaustive characterizations of influence relations and the atomic types of influence	19
2.4. Some terminological conventions	21
2.5. A quantified version of the argument of sections 2.2 and 2.3, and sub-formations induced by influence relations	22
2.6. Exercising and having control, 'can do', and some valid statements of higher order	26
3. NORMATIVE RELATIONS
3.1. Punitive power, normative relations, and the simple types of normative relation in a system L_2 which contains L_1	31
3.2. The first hypothesis of consistency characteristic of L_2, and the distinction between the simple and the atomic types of normative relation	32

3.3. Normative power of two or more power holders over one and the same subject, and the second hypothesis of consistency 35
3.4. Normative power of one power holder over two or more subjects, and the third hypothesis of consistency 36
3.5. Simple and atomic components which correspond to one another but are not subject-uniform 38
3.6. A collection of statements that hold in L_2 39
3.7. Some doubly general statements, and some statements of higher order 41

4. RIGHTS
4.1. The sub-formations induced by the atomic components of a normative system 44
4.2. Hohfeld's scheme of jural relations 46
4.3. A normative explication of the simple types of rights 46
4.4. The correlatives and opposites of rights of simple types 48
4.5. The interrelations of rights of simple types 49
4.6. Sub-formations and rights of atomic types 50
4.7. Powers, permissions, rights in influence systems, and rights in normative systems 52
4.8. A second explication of Hohfeld's scheme 53

5. NORMS
5.1. Normative statements, norm-statements, and their content 58
5.2. On the logic of norm-statements 59
5.3. The truth-value of norm-statements, and norms which exist or are in force 60
5.4. The division of a corpus of actions into regular and irregular actions 61
5.5. Deviations from norms, regulations, and valid norms 63
5.6. On statements of detachments of norms which are in force 64
5.7. On the relevance of L_2 to the analysis of norms of kinds other than those considered 66

6. POWER
6.1. Normative relations subject to influence and influence relations subject to normative power 68
6.2. Normative action which creates conditional normative relations 70
6.3. On power defined disjunctively 73

6.4. The relation between influence and normative power, and the simple types of power 74
6.5. Concluding remarks 77
