

Essays on the philosophy of music

Ernst Bloch

translated by Peter Palmer

with an introduction by David Drew

*The right of the University of Cambridge to print and sell
all manner of books was granted by
Henry VIII in 1534.
The University has printed and published continuously since 1584.*

Cambridge University Press

Cambridge

New York Port Chester

Melbourne Sydney

Contents

Translator's preface	page vii
Introduction by David Drew	xi
I The philosophy of music	1
DREAM	1
ON THE HISTORY OF MUSIC	1
Beginnings	2
The Method – The technical succession – The sociological context – The explosive youth of music – The problem of a philosophy of musical history	5
Fulness and its Schema – The song – On Mozart	16
– The Passions – Bach, his form and his object
– Carmen – Open-ended song and Fidelio – Missa solemnis – The birth of the sonata – Brahms and chamber music – Beethoven, his form, his object and the spirit of the sonata – Strauss, Mahler, Bruckner
– On Wagner – Forerunners – False polemics
– Speech-song, syncopated rhythm and chordal polyphony – The transcendent opera and its object
ON THE THEORY OF MUSIC	66
Practice and composition – Inflexion – Attack	67
– The creative musical setting
Interpretation, or On the relation between absolute and speculative music – The 'what' of expression in general – The philosophical theory of music	84
Means, formulae, forms and phenomenal aspect of the transcending theory of music – The note as means	93
– The theory of harmony as formula – Relations of rhythm as form – Bachian and Beethovenian counterpointing as form and incipient ideogram
– The note again, not as a means but as a phenomenal entity – On the thing-in-itself in music
THE MYSTERY	133

CONTENTS

II	Magic rattle, human harp	140
III	Paradoxes and the pastorate in Wagner's music	146
	SOME PRELIMINARY REMARKS	146
	STARTING AFRESH	148
	THE QUESTION OF BEL CANTO	149
	THE QUESTION OF THE PARADOXES	151
	THE QUESTION OF THE 'OMNISCIENT' LEITMOTIF	168
	THE QUESTION OF THE RESONANT PASTORALE	175
IV	On the mathematical and dialectical character in music (Essay, 1925)	183
V	The exceeding of limits and the world of man at its most richly intense in music	195
	THE GOOD FORTUNE OF THE BLIND	195
	SYRINX THE NYMPH	196
	BIZARRE HERO AND NYMPH: 'SYMPHONIE FANTASTIQUE'	197
	HUMAN EXPRESSION AS INSEPARABLE FROM MUSIC	199
	MUSIC AS CANON AND ORDERED WORLD; HARMONY OF THE SPHERES, MORE HUMANE POLE-STARS	208
	TONE-PAINTING; WORK OF NATURE AGAIN; THE INTENSITY AND MORALITY OF MUSIC	219
	THE HOLLOW SPACE; THE SUBJECT OF THE SONATA AND FUGUE	228
	FUNERAL MARCH, REQUIEM, PROCESSION BEHIND DEATH	236
	MARSEILLAISE AND TWINKLING OF AN EYE IN 'FIDELIO'	241
	Translator's notes	244
	Index of persons and musical works	247