Preface	v
1. Threats and Promises	I
1.1 A World of Threats and Promises	I
1.2 Five Dispositions	5
1.3 Dispositional Explanations	11
1.4 Causally Efficacious Properties versus Conditional Analyses	14
1.5 The Metaphysical Question	17
1.6 Contrasts with Dispositions	20
1.7 Strategy	22
2. Dispositions in Mind and Matter	25
2.1 Two Appeals to Dispositions	25
2.2 Ryle on the Dispositional Analysis of Mind	26
2.3 The Ontological Status of Matter	30
3. The Conditional Analysis	36
3.1 Empiricism and Event Ontologies	36
3.2 Dispositions and Conditionals	37
3.3 Verificationism	42
3.4 Material Implication	45
3.5 Carnap's Paradox	46
3.6 Anti-Realism and the Acquisition Argument	50
3.7 Towards a Realist Theory of Dispositions	51
3.8 Properties, Structures, and Kinds	58
3.9 Leaving behind the Conditional Analysis	62
4. The Dispositional–Categorical Distinction	64
4.1 The Distinction	64
4.2 First Objection: Disposition Ascriptions Do Not uniquely Entail Conditionals	67
4.3 An Unsuccessful Reply	68

4.4	Loose Living: A Problem for Mellor	72
4.5	Preliminaries to the Functionalist Theory	73
4.6	The Functionalist Response to the First Objection	78
4.7	Second Objection: Not Even Disposition Ascriptions Entail Conditionals	81
4.8	An Unsuccessful Reply	84
4.9	The Context of Ideal Conditions	87
4.10	The Defence of Realism	91
5.	Property Dualism	93
5.1	Irreducibility as an Ontological Thesis	93
5.2	The Dualist Claim	95
5.3	Explanatory Asymmetry	99
5.4	Variable Realization and the Swamping Argument	101
5.5	Place's Dualism	105
5.6	The Argument from Rigid Designation	109
5.7	Potentiality and Actuality	111
5.8	Problems for Dualism	112
5.9	Three Better Theses about Dispositions	116
6.	Dispositions as Causes	118
6.1	Causes and Causal Explanations	118
6.2	Causal Efficacy and the Existence of Properties	121
6.3	States as Causes	126
6.4	Do Explanations Appeal to Dispositions?	128
6.5	The First Triviality Objection	133
6.6	Virtus Dormitiva	136
6.7	'Uncombable Hair Syndrome'	138
6.8	The Cause of G Caused G	139
6.9	Causes par excellence	141
6.10	A Return to Ontology	142
7.	Property Monism	144
7.1	Monism Replaces Dualism	144
7.2	The Monist Claim	145
7.3	The Occupants of Causal Role R	148
7.4	The Validity of the Argument	151

7.5	Epistemic Counterparts and World Relative Ascriptions	154
7.6	Variable Realization and Instantiations of Properties	157
7.7	Identity Conditions	162
7.8	Supplementary Claims of Property Monism	164
7.9	Abstract Dispositions	165
7.10	Ungrounded Dispositions	167
8.	Eliminativism and Reductionism	170
8.1	Reductionist and Eliminativist Monisms	170
8.2	The Varieties of Property Monism	172
8.3	For Eliminativism	177
8.4	Against Eliminativism	180
8.5	Reductionism: The Arguments Assessed	183
8.6	Monism without Reductionism	190
9.	A Functionalist Theory of Dispositions	192
9.1	Preliminaries: Non-Linguistic Reality and Descriptive Idioms	192
9.2	The Place of the Functionalist Theory	195
9.3	Varieties of Functionalism	197
9.4	Functions and Dispositions	200
9.5	Functionalism and Causation	204
9.6	Functional Specification versus Functional State Identity Theory	206
9.7	Relativity of Ascription and Teleology	207
9.8	Homunctionalism	210
9.9	Continuity in Levels of Nature	213
10.	Laws of Nature Outlawed	216
10.1	Two World Views	216
10.2	Events Explained by Laws of Nature	218
10.3	Events Explained by Dispositions	220
10.4	The Problem with Laws	222
10.5	Prescriptive and Descriptive Laws	226
10.6	An Explanatory Ontology	228

10.7	Generality	232
10.8	Contingency	236
