

Contents

Preface	viii
Introduction	ix
CHAPTER ONE The nature of suicide	1
1 Conceptual distinctions	1
2 Intention	2
3 What counts as suicide?	4
4 Did Socrates commit suicide?	8
5 Knowledge of intentions	12
6 'Revenge' suicide	15
7 The moral issues	16
8 Suicide and the law	17
9 The historical dimension	18
CHAPTER TWO The historical debate on suicide	21
1 Suicide defended	21
2 Biathanatos	25
3 Suicide not against nature	26
4 Suicide not against reason	28
5 Suicide not against God	30
6 A judgement on life	31
7 David Hume on suicide	32
8 Hume on duties to others and ourselves	35
9 The new standpoint	36
10 Classical utilitarianism and suicide: Bentham and Mill	39
11 Changes of attitude	40

12	Liberty and suicide	42
13	Inadequacies of utilitarianism	44
14	Suicide and the legal debate	47
15	Coroners	51
CHAPTER THREE Life, death and the absurd		55
1	Schopenhauer on suicide	55
2	The will-in-itself	56
3	Denial of the will: salvation	58
4	Criticisms and comments	60
5	Suicide and the meaning of life	61
6	The myth of Sisyphus	64
7	Two kinds of suicide	65
8	The framework of Camus's thought	66
9	Rebellion and truth	68
10	Thomas Nagel and the absurd	70
CHAPTER FOUR Existentialism and suicide		76
1	From absurdity to existence	76
2	Existential freedom	79
3	The philosophical underpinning	81
4	Morality and existential suicide	84
5	'The radical decision'	88
6	'Bad faith' and anguish	90
7	Good faith	94
8	The Sartrean point of view	96
CHAPTER FIVE Morality and suicide		104
1	Existentialism considered	104
2	Being and doing	107
3	A moral self	110
4	Reflecting on suicide	112
5	A natural metaphysics	113
6	Dying well	116
CHAPTER SIX Killing and letting die		121
1	Euthanasia: definitions and distinctions	121
2	An historical and legal note	124
3	'Nursing care only'	129
4	'Active and passive euthanasia'	131
5	Some problems with Rachels	136

6	What is the distinction?	140
7	Intention and negative responsibility	143
CHAPTER SEVEN Extraordinary means and double effects		153
1	The doctrine of double effect	153
2	Extraordinary means	159
3	Grounds for euthanasia	162
CHAPTER EIGHT Should the numbers count?		169
1	The ethics of resource allocation	169
2	Numbers	175
3	Collectivism and individualism	184
4	Conclusion	190
Index		195