

CONTENTS

CHAPTER I. THE PROBLEMS OF HUMAN FREEDOM

1.1 The aims of the essay	1
1.2 Four arguments against human freedom	2

CHAPTER II. ANTECEDENT TRUTH, FOREKNOWLEDGE AND PRE-ORDINATION

2.1 The argument from antecedent truth	5
2.2 The theistic form of the argument from foreknowledge	7
2.3 The non-theistic form of the argument from foreknowledge	12
2.4 The argument from God's pre-ordination	15

CHAPTER III. LEIBNIZ'S THEORY OF THE WILL

3.1 Leibniz and the 'standard theory' of the will	18
3.2 Leibniz's account of motivation	23
3.3 Leibniz's account of desire	28
3.4 Antecedent and consequent will: the conflict of desires and motives	30

CHAPTER IV. A CRITIQUE OF LEIBNIZ'S THEORY

4.1 Some criticisms of the standard theory of the will	35
4.2 The infinite regress argument against volitions	40
4.3 Weaknesses in Leibniz's account of desire	41
4.4 Leibniz's account of human action	42

CHAPTER V. CAUSALITY AND HUMAN FREEDOM

5.1 The causal argument against human freedom	46
5.2 Leibniz's arguments against the thesis of indifference	47
5.3 'Inclining without necessitating'	50
5.4 Freedom as spontaneity and choice	55
5.5 Freedom and rationality	61
5.6 Leibniz's views on reward and punishment	64