

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

I. THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF THE POLITICS	xi
1. The period down to 347	xii
§ 2. The period from 347 to 335	xiv
§ 3. The period after 335	xix
II. THE SCIENTIFIC BACKGROUND OF THE POLITICS	xxvii
§ 1. The personality of Aristotle and the characteristics of his approach to politics	xxvii
§ 2. The Aristotelian School in the Lyceum	xxxii
§ 3. The Aristotelian writings and their different styles	xxxv
§ 4. The composition and structure of the Politics	xxxvii
(a) The different sections or 'methods'	xxxvii
(b) The problem of the order of the books	xxxix
(c) The problem of the chronology of different sections of the Politics	xli
III. THE SUBSTANCE AND ARGUMENT OF THE POLITICS	xlvii
§ 1. The idea of the Polis	xlvii
§ 2. The natural character of the Polis	xlviii
§ 3. The dominance of the Polis	l
§ 4. The ideal Polis and the criticism of actual states	lii
§ 5. Aristotle's conception of law	liv
§ 6. Aristotle's theory of 'economy' and education	lv
§ 7. The later history of Aristotle's political theory	lix
IV. THE VOCABULARY OF THE POLITICS	lxiii
§ 1. The vocabulary of the conception of state	lxiv
§ 2. The vocabulary of the conception of government	lxvii
§ 3. The vocabulary of the conceptions of law and justice	lxviii
§ 4. Philosophical terms	lxxii
§ 5. Social and moral terms	lxxiii

TRANSLATION OF ARISTOTLE'S POLITICS

NOTE. The titles of the different books, the division of each book into parts, and the headings of these parts, are due solely to the translator.

BOOK I. THE THEORY OF THE HOUSEHOLD	I
A. The political association, and its relation to other associations (cc. i-ii)	I
B. The association of the household and its different factors (cc. iii-xiii)	8
1. The constituent elements of the household (c. iii)	8
2. Slavery (cc. iv-vii)	9
3. Property and the art of acquisition (cc. viii-xi)	18
4. Marriage, parenthood, and the general management of the household (cc. xii-xiii)	32

BOOK II. REVIEW OF IDEAL STATES	39
A. Ideal states in theory (cc. i-viii)	39
1. Plato's Republic (cc. i-v)	39
2. Plato's Laws (c. vi)	56
3. Phaleas of Chalcedon (c. vii)	62
4. Hippodamus of Miletus (c. viii)	68
B. Actual states which approach the ideal (cc. ix-xii)	73
1. The Spartan constitution (c. ix)	73
2. The Cretan type of constitution (c. x)	80
3. The Carthaginian constitution (c. xi)	83
4. Postscript on other legislators (c. xii)	87
BOOK III. THE THEORY OF CITIZENSHIP AND CONSTITUTIONS	92
A. Citizenship (cc. i-v)	92
B. Constitutions and their classification (cc. vi-viii)	110
C. The principles of oligarchy and democracy, and the nature of distributive justice (cc. ix-xiii)	116
D. Kingship and its forms (cc. xiv-xviii)	137
BOOK IV. ACTUAL CONSTITUTIONS AND THEIR VARIETIES	154
A. Introductory (cc. i-ii)	154
B. The varieties of the main types of constitution, especially democracy, oligarchy, and 'polity' (cc. iii-x)	160
C. The type of constitution which is most generally practicable (c. xi)	179
D. What sort of constitution is desirable for what sort of civic body? (cc. xii-xiii)	184
E. The methods of establishing constitutions, in relation to the three powers—deliberative, executive, and judicial (cc. xiv-xvi)	188
BOOK V. CAUSES OF REVOLUTION AND CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGE	203
A. The general causes of revolution and change in all types of constitution (cc. i-iv)	203
B. The particular causes of revolution and change in different types of constitution (cc. v-xii)	214
1. Democracies (c. v)	214
2. Oligarchies (c. vi)	217
3. Aristocracies (c. vii)	221
4. The methods of ensuring constitutional stability in the three previous types of constitution (cc. viii-ix)	224
5. Monarchies—including both kingships and tyrannies (cc. x-xiii)	235
BOOK VI. METHODS OF CONSTRUCTING DEMOCRACIES AND OLIGARCHIES	255
A. The construction of democracies (cc. i-v)	255
B. The construction of oligarchies (cc. vi-viii)	270

CONTENTS

ix

BOOK VII. POLITICAL IDEALS AND EDUCATIONAL PRINCIPLES	279
A. Political ideals: the nature of the highest good and of the best and happiest life (cc. i-iii)	279
B. The population, the territory, the natural endowment of the inhabitants, the social structure, and the physical planning of the central city, in an ideal state (cc. iv-xii)	289
1. The population (c. iv)	289
2. The territory (cc. v-vi)	293
3. The natural endowment (c. vii)	295
4. The social structure (cc. viii-x)	297
5. The planning of the central city (cc. xi-xii)	306
C. The general principles of education (cc. xiii-xv)	311
1. The end and the means (c. xiii)	311
2. Education and citizenship: education for leisure, and education of character (cc. xiv-xv)	314
D. The early stages of education (cc. xvi-xvii)	324
1. The regulation of marriage for the purpose of ensuring a good offspring (c. xvi)	324
2. The nursery and the infant school (c. xvii)	328
BOOK VIII. THE TRAINING OF YOUTH	332
A. The general scheme of training (cc. i-iii)	332
B. Physical training, or gymnastic (c. iv)	338
C. The aims and methods of education in music (cc. v-vii)	339

APPENDIXES

I. THE CONCEPTION OF POLITICS IN THE ETHICS AND THE RHETORIC	354
II. THE CONCEPTION OF JUSTICE, LAW, AND EQUITY IN THE ETHICS AND THE RHETORIC	362
III. THE CLASSIFICATION OF CONSTITUTIONS IN THE ETHICS AND THE RHETORIC	373
IV. ARISTOTLE ON THE CONSTITUTION OF ATHENS	377
V. THE POLITICAL MISCELLANIES OF ARISTOTLE	385

INDEX	391
-----------------	-----