

CONTENTS

	page
PREFATORY REMARKS	vii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xi
I. IN WHAT SENSE CAN VALUE BE ANALYSED?	I
2. IS VALUE A FIRST-ORDER PROPERTY?	4
2a. Is value a quality?	4
2b. Is value a (first-order) relation?	7
3. IS VALUE A SECOND-ORDER PROPERTY?	12
3a. Is value a property of ordinary first-order properties?	12
3b. Is value a property of an ontologically peculiar property?	16
4. IS VALUE A PROPERTY OF STATES OF AFFAIRS?	21
4a. Are there states of affairs?	22
4b. If so, what are they?	24
4c. Do they have any properties?	35
4d. If so, what sort of properties are they?	42
4e. Can value be treated as a property of states of affairs?	51
5. IS VALUE THE REFERENT OF A SEMANTICAL PREDICATE?	63
5a. Is value the being an object of an interest?	67
5b. Is value the fittingness of an attitude to its object?	80
5c. Is value the being an object of a right love?	94
6. WHAT IS THE PROPER SYNTAX OF VALUE-SENTENCES?	113
6a. Are value-sentences properly rendered as imperatives?	113
6b. Are value-sentences properly rendered as normatives?	154
7. WHAT IS THE SIGNIFICANCE OF LINGUISTIC ANALYSIS FOR VALUE-THEORY?	191
7a. Can the syntax of an ideal language show the status of value?	191
7b. Can semantical rules for value-sentences show the status of value?	225
CONCLUDING REMARKS	247
INDEX OF PROPER NAMES	251
SUBJECT-MATTER INDEX	253