

Contents

Introduction	vii
PART ONE
1 The end of ideology and the end of the end of ideology	3
2 God and the theologians	12
3 Psychoanalysis: the future of an illusion?	27
4 The socialism of R. H. Tawney	38
5 How not to write about Lenin	43
6 How not to write about Stalin	48
7 Trotsky in exile	52
8 Marxist mask and romantic face: Lukács on Thomas Mann	60
9 Marxism of the will	70
10 Pascal and Marx: On Lucien Goldmann's Hidden God	76
PART TWO
11 Philosophy and ideology: Introduction to Part Two	91
12 What morality is not	96
13 Hume on "is" and "ought"	109
14 Imperatives, reasons for action, and morals	125
15 "Ought"	136
16 Some more about "ought"	157
17 Pleasure as a reason for action	173
18 The antecedents of action	191
19 The idea of a social science	211
20 Emotion, behavior and belief	230
21 Rationality and the explanation of action	244

22	Is a science of comparative politics possible?	260
23	Political and philosophical epilogue: a view of The Poverty of Liberalism by Robert Paul Wolff	280