

CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE
Foreword	7
PART I
I. What Makes a History Book History	15
II. Truth in History Books	19
III. The Unity of an Historical Work	23
IV. The Historical Meaning of Necessity	27
V. Historical Knowledge Considered as Complete Knowledge	32
VI. The Categories of History and the Forms of the Spirit	37
VII. The Distinction Between Action and Thought	40
VIII. Historiography as Liberation from History	43
IX. History Considered as a Premise of the Struggle Between Value and Non-value	46
X. History as Action	50
XI. Moral Activity	55
XII. History as the History of Liberty	59

PART II

HISTORICISM AND ITS HISTORY

I. Its Own Character and the Beginning of Its Own Age	65
II. Historicism Complete and Incomplete	78
III. The Anecdote	118
IV. The Imagination—The Anecdote and Historiography	127

History

CHAPTER	PAGE
V. Philology, History and Philosophy	133
VI. The "Philosophy of History"	140
VII. Philosophy as an Antiquated Idea	147
VIII. The Identity of the Judgment of Events with the Knowledge of Their Genesis	151
IX. Objections	154

PART III

HISTORIOGRAPHY AND POLITICS

I. The So-called Irrational in History	161
II. Political Historiography	170
III. Historians and Politicians	175
IV. Historiography—Partisan and Non-partisan	179
V. The Preparatory and Non-determinate Character of Historiography as Regards Action	187
VI. The Need for Historical Knowledge where Action is Concerned Two Marginal Notes	196 200

PART IV

HISTORIOGRAPHY AND MORALS

I. Moral Judgment in Historiography	207
II. Psychological Historiography	214
III. Religious Historiography	219
IV. Ethico-Political Historiography and Economic Facts	223
V. Political Parties and Their Historical Character	227
VI. Strength and Violence, Reason and Impulse	235

Contents

CHAPTER	PAGE
VII. Moral Life and Economic Ordinances	241
VIII. Ideal Perpetuity and Historical Formations	245
IX. Religious Piety and Religion	250
X. History and Utopia	256

PART V

PROSPECTS OF HISTORIOGRAPHY

I. History Does Not Repeat Itself and Does Not Preserve Itself Intact	265
II. Shades of Agnosticism, Mysticism and Scepticism, and the Light of Historical Truth	272
III. Humanity in Fragments and Integral Humanity	278
IV. History to be Written and History Not to be Written	282
V. Historiography and Naturalism	288
VI. Nature as History, not as History Written by Us	292
VII. Prehistory and History	298
VIII. Chronological and Historical Epochs	301
IX. Natural Species and Historical Formations	306
X. Poetry and Historiography	310
XI. Historicism and Humanism	315
Index	321