

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. The Philosophy of History . . . . .	I
§ 2. History's Nature, Object, Method, and Value . . . . .	7
§ 3. The Problem of Parts I-IV . . . . .	10

PART I. GRECO-ROMAN HISTORIOGRAPHY

§ 1. Theocratic History and Myth . . . . .	14
§ 2. The Creation of Scientific History by Herodotus . . . . .	17
§ 3. Anti-historical Tendency of Greek Thought . . . . .	20
§ 4. Greek Conception of History's Nature and Value . . . . .	21
§ 5. Greek Historical Method and its Limitations . . . . .	25
§ 6. Herodotus and Thucydides . . . . .	28
§ 7. The Hellenistic Period . . . . .	31
§ 8. Polybius . . . . .	33
§ 9. Livy and Tacitus . . . . .	36
§ 10. Character of Greco-Roman Historiography: (i) Humanism . . . . .	40
§ 11. (ii) Substantialism . . . . .	42

PART II. THE INFLUENCE OF CHRISTIANITY

§ 1. The Leaven of Christian Ideas . . . . .	46
§ 2. Characteristics of Christian Historiography . . . . .	49
§ 3. Medieval Historiography . . . . .	52
§ 4. The Renaissance Historians . . . . .	57
§ 5. Descartes . . . . .	59
§ 6. Cartesian Historiography . . . . .	61
§ 7. Anti-Cartesianism: (i) Vico . . . . .	63
§ 8. (ii) Locke, Berkeley, and Hume . . . . .	71
§ 9. The Enlightenment . . . . .	76
§ 10. The Science of Human Nature . . . . .	81

PART III. THE THRESHOLD OF SCIENTIFIC HISTORY

§ 1. Romanticism . . . . .	86
§ 2. Herder . . . . .	88
§ 3. Kant . . . . .	93
§ 4. Schiller . . . . .	104
§ 5. Fichte . . . . .	106
§ 6. Schelling . . . . .	111
§ 7. Hegel . . . . .	113
§ 8. Hegel and Marx . . . . .	122
§ 9. Positivism . . . . .	126

PART IV. SCIENTIFIC HISTORY

§ 1. England . . . . .	134
(i) Bradley . . . . .	134
(ii) Bradley's Successors . . . . .	142
(iii) Late Nineteenth-century Historiography . . . . .	143
(iv) Bury . . . . .	147
(v) Oakeshott . . . . .	151
(vi) Toynbee . . . . .	159
§ 2. Germany . . . . .	165
(i) Windelband . . . . .	165
(ii) Rickert . . . . .	168
(iii) Simmel . . . . .	170
(iv) Dilthey . . . . .	171
(v) Meyer . . . . .	176
(vi) Spengler . . . . .	181
§ 3. France . . . . .	183
(i) Ravaisson's Spiritualism . . . . .	183
(ii) Lachelier's Idealism . . . . .	185
(iii) Bergson's Evolutionism . . . . .	187
(iv) Modern French Historiography . . . . .	189
§ 4. Italy . . . . .	190
(i) Croce's Essay of 1893 . . . . .	190
(ii) Croce's Second Position: the Logic . . . . .	194
(iii) History and Philosophy . . . . .	196
(iv) History and Nature . . . . .	197
(v) Croce's Final Position: the Autonomy of History . . . . .	201

PART V. EPILEGOMENA

§ 1. Human Nature and Human History . . . . .	205
§ 2. The Historical Imagination . . . . .	231
§ 3. Historical Evidence . . . . .	249
§ 4. History as Re-enactment of Past Experience . . . . .	282
§ 5. The Subject-matter of History . . . . .	302
§ 6. History and Freedom . . . . .	315
§ 7. Progress as created by Historical Thinking . . . . .	321

INDEX . . . . .	335
-----------------	-----