

CONTENTS

	PAGE
PREFACE . . . . .	v
TRANSLATOR'S NOTE . . . . .	vi
INTRODUCTION: THE PHILOSOPHY OF LEIBNIZ . . . . .	i

PART ONE: UNITY

CHAPTER I: SPACE AND TIME

1. The problem of what space is . . . . .	11
2. The axiomatic character of geometry . . . . .	16
3. The constructive character of geometry . . . . .	21
4. The a priori character of geometry . . . . .	27
5. Geometry and natural science . . . . .	34
6. The transcendental ideality of space and time . . . . .	37

CHAPTER II: THE WORLD

7. The problem of antinomies and its historical antecedents . . . . .	42
8. The problem of antinomies in theory of science . . . . .	50
9. The transcendental ideality of the world . . . . .	56

CHAPTER III: NATURE

10. Biology, theology, and mechanics as the goals of science in ancient, mediaeval, and modern times. . . . .	65
11. Nature in Kant as Newtonian nature . . . . .	67
12. The a priori character of Newtonian nature . . . . .	71
13. The relational character of Newtonian nature . . . . .	90
14. The transcendental ideality of Newtonian nature . . . . .	93

CHAPTER IV: UNITY

15. Unity in the ontologies of Plato and Aristotle . . . . .	98
16. Unity in scholastic ontology . . . . .	105
17. Universals and relations . . . . .	115
18. Unity in Leibniz's ontology . . . . .	118
19. The transcendental ideality of unity . . . . .	122

PART TWO: BEING

CHAPTER V: THE MODES OF BEING

20.	The three great themes of metaphysics . . . . .	129
21.	The aporiae of the thing in itself . . . . .	134
22.	Phenomena and noumena in the Critique of Pure Reason . . . . .	141
23.	Phenomena and noumena in the second Critique . . . . .	146
24.	Temporality and spatiality as ontological characters . . . . .	150
25.	The being of appearances . . . . .	155
26.	The being of God . . . . .	158
27.	The being of the acting subject . . . . .	170
28.	The being of the thinking subject . . . . .	176
29.	The being of things in themselves . . . . .	182

CHAPTER VI: BEING AS A WHOLE

30.	Man as appearance and as thing in himself . . . . .	189
31.	The analogical character of the concept of being . . . . .	193
32.	Reality and being . . . . .	197

NOTES . . . . .	207
-----------------	-----

INDEX . . . . .	215
-----------------	-----