

CONTENTS

Preface	xiii
1. MORAL DISCOURSE AND MORAL PHILOSOPHY	1
An Example of Moral Discourse	1
Is There a Connection between Moral Philosophy and First-Order Moral Discourse?	12
2. MORAL DISCOURSE AND THEORIES OF MEANING	19
I. THE REFERENTIAL THEORY	21
Simplest Form of the Theory	21
A More Sophisticated Version of the Theory	22
Wittgenstein's "Picture Theory"	24
The Referential Theory and Moral Discourse	31
II. THE VERIFICATIONIST THEORY	32
Logical Positivism	32
The Verification Principle and Moral Discourse	36

III. THE CAUSAL, OR PSYCHOLOGICAL, THEORY	37
Two Senses of Meaning	37
The Psychological Theory and Moral Dis- course	43
IV. MEANING AS USE	44
The Later Wittgenstein and the Need to Look at the Use to Which Language Is Put	44
Depth Grammar, Forms of Life, and Moral Discourse	47
J. L. Austin and What We Do with Words	54
Meaning, Illocutionary Force, and Moral Discourse	57
3. THE INTUITIONIST THEORY	65
I. MOORE AND THE REJECTION OF ETHICAL NATURALISM	66
Good as Indefinable	66
The Naturalistic Fallacy	69
Moore's Predecessors	72
Did Mill Commit the Naturalistic Fallacy?	74
Are Moore's Arguments Good Ones?	79
Is Ethical Naturalism Defensible?	84
II. THE INTUITIONISM OF PRICHARD AND ROSS	87
H. A. Prichard	89
W. D. Ross	92
A Predecessor of Prichard and Ross	98

III. THE CLAIM TO KNOW BY MORAL INTUITION	100
4. THE EMOTIVIST THEORY.	107
I. THE REJECTION OF NONNATURALISM	107
Wittgenstein and the Logical Positivists	107
The Dynamic Character of Moral Discourse	111
II. STEVENSON'S ACCOUNT OF EMOTIVISM	113
Origins of Emotivism	113
Stevenson's Three Features of Moral Discourse	114
Disagreement in Attitude and Belief	116
The Meaning of Moral Judgments	121
Stevenson's Patterns of Analysis and the Methodology of Moral Argument	126
III. CRITICISM OF EMOTIVISM	132
Moral Effects of Emotivism	132
Two Confusions	134
Is Stevenson Self-Consistent?	137
Stevenson's Psychological Theory of Meaning	140
Meaning and Suggestion	142
Truth and Falsity	143
Validity and Invalidity	145
Does Stevenson's Theory Fit the Facts?	147

5. PRESCRIPTIVISM	155
I. THE REJECTION OF EMOTIVISM	155
Reasons and Causes	155
Meaning and Perlocutionary Force	160
II. HARE'S ACCOUNT OF PRESCRIPTIVISM	164
(I) PRESCRIPTIVITY	164
Supervenience	164
Value-Judgments and Imperatives	167
(II) UNIVERSALIZABILITY	179
How and Why Are Value Judgments Universalizable?	179
What Makes a Value Judgment Moral?	184
(III) LOGICAL RELATIONS	195
III. CRITICISM	201
(I) CRITICISM: PRESCRIPTIVITY	201
Is Prescriptivism Plausible?	203
How Far Does Hare's Prescriptivism Go beyond Emotivism?	206
(II) CRITICISM: UNIVERSALIZABILITY	209
Some Misunderstandings	210
Situation Ethics	213
Act- and Rule-Utilitarianism	215
MacIntyre's Criticism	217
Is the Universalizability Thesis True but Trivial?	223

The Universalizability Thesis and Utilitarianism	227
Is the Universalizability Thesis a Moral Principle?	230
(III) CRITICISM: LOGICAL RELATIONS	231
Neustics and Phrastics	231
Hare's Rules	234
Value-Words and Speech-Acts	237
Kinds and Levels of Meaning	239
6. DESCRIPTIVISM	249
I. THE INTERPRETATION OF HUME ON "IS" AND "OUGHT"	249
The Accepted Interpretation	251
New Interpretation No. 1	252
New Interpretation No. 2	255
Which Interpretation Is Correct?	262
II. OUGHTS AND WANTS	264
Does "Ought" Mean "Wants"?	265
Does "Wants" Constitute a Conclusive Reason for "Ought"?	270
Why Be Just?	272
Why Be Moral?	276
III. INSTITUTIONAL FACT	282
Searle's Attempt to Derive "Ought" from "Is"	282
Criticism of Searle	285
Descriptivists and Prescriptivists	291

IV. THE PROS AND CONS OF DESCRIPTIVISM	294
Description and Evaluation	295
Criteria and Choice	298 *
Is There Anything Which Cannot Be Denied to Be Good?	304
A Proposed Middle Way	307
Is Morality Logically Grounded in Human Needs?	311
Flourishing	317
Ethics and Anthropology	320
7. ACTION AND RESPONSIBILITY	331
I. NEGATIVE CONDITIONS OF RESPONSIBLE ACTION	333
II. POSITIVE CONDITIONS OF RESPONSIBLE ACTION	338
Is Free Will Compatible with Deter- minism?	339
Does "Can" Require an If Clause to Complete Its Sense?	345
The Language of Action and the Language of Event	350
Index	367