

Contents

PART I

Preface and Acknowledgements	vii
Chapter One	3
1. Criteria of the Mental and the Physical	4
2. Type-Type Identity Theories and the Objection From Phenomenal Properties	17
3. Rejoinders to Smart: Nagel, Jackson, and Kripke	20
4. The Problem of Variable Realizability	33
Chapter Two	40
1. Armstrong's Early View	41
2. Lewis's Position	46
3. The Causal-Role Identity Theory and Type-Type Identities	49
4. Causal-Role/Functional Specification and Type-Type Identities	60
5. The CR/FS Identity Theory and Token-Token Identities	66
Chapter Three	83
1. Non-Reductive Monism	84
2. Causal Anomalism of the Mental	87
3. Nomological Monism	99
4. Kim's View of Phenomenal Mental Properties	102

PART II

Chapter Four	107
1. Identity Conditions for Events	108
2. Kim and the Property-Exemplification Account of Events	113
3. Kim's Version Considered	117
4. Lombard's Version of the PE Account	123
5. Non-Reductive Monism and the PE Account	135
6. Mental Properties and Type-Type Identities	143
Chapter Five	156
1. The PNCC: What Does It Entail?	157
2. Mental Causation and the Epiphenomenalist Charge	159
3. Causal Relevance and Explanatory Value	164
4. The Mereology Objection	168
5. The PNCC: Does It Require the Mereological Conception?	172
6. The PNCC: Can It be Independently Motivated? Does Non-Reductive Monism Need it?	182
Chapter Six	192
1. Conceptions of Supervenience	193
2. Strong Supervenience: Too Strong?	197
3. Context Dependence and Token Identity	206
4. Weak Supervenience: Too Weak?	217
5. A Residual Question	226
Notes	229
Bibliography	244
Index	252