

CONTENTS

I	Introduction	1
	(a) Philosophical Method	2
	(b) The Confusion of Common Sense and Ordinary Language	5
II	Common Sense	9
	(a) The Acceptance of Common Sense	9
	(b) The Criteria of Common Sense	11
	(c) Common Sense Statements as Ultimate	15
III	Ordinary Language	21
	(a) The Meaning of ' Ordinary Language '	21
	(b) The Language of Philosophers	29
	(c) The Appeal to Ordinary Language	32
IV	Meaning... ..	39
	(a) The Concept Theory of Meaning	39
	(b) The Analysandum	50
	(c) A Technical Meaning of ' Meaning '	53
V	Analysis	66
	(a) Analysis as Inspection	66
	(b) Analysis as Division	73
	(c) Analysis as Distinction	74
VI	Analysis and Language	84
	(a) Logic and Language	84
	(b) The Criteria of a Correct Analysis	88
	(c) Synonymity	98
	(d) The Ultimate Appeal	112

CONTENTS

VII	Ethics	116
	(a) The Task of Ethics	116
	(b) The Ambiguity of ' Good '	118
	(c) The Indefinability of Good and the Naturalistic Fallacy	122
	(d) Attitude Theories of ' Good '	127
	(i) Descriptions of Attitudes	128
	(ii) ' Good ' as Non-Descriptive	134
	(e) ' Intrinsic ' and ' Intrinsically Good '	140
	(f) ' Right ', ' Duty ', ' Ought '	144
VIII	Perception	148
	(a) The Introduction of Sense-Data	151
	(b) The Relation of Sense-Data to Perception	164
	(c) The Relation of Sense-Data to Material Objects	168
	(d) The Legitimacy of Sense-Data	175
IX	The Historical Setting... ..	191
	(a) Eighteenth Century Predecessors	191
	(i) Berkeley	191
	(ii) Reid	192
	(b) Twentieth Century Contemporaries	199
	(i) Logical Atomism: Russell and Wittgenstein	201
	(ii) Continental and American Analysts	209
	(iii) Period of Transition	211
	(iv) Wittgenstein's Philosophical Investigations	213
	(v) Ryle and Wisdom	216
	Bibliography of Moore's Writings	221