

Contents

A Note on Punctuation	9
Introduction: Philosophy as Intellectual Construction	13
1. The Epistemological Problem for Mental Phenomena	27
1. Background of the Problem	27
2. The Transition Model of Identification and Description	33
3. Application I of the Transition Model	38
4. Application II of the Transition Model	50
5. Foundations for a Model of Nontransitional Self-description	55
2. The Apparent Existence of Private Mental Objects in One Family of Psychological Phenomena	84
1. Preliminary Remarks	84
2. The Model of Truncated Awareness and Description	85
3. Afterimages	97
4. Dreams	99
5. Pains	104
3. Completion of the General Model	123
1. Review of the Problem	123
2. Addition of Principle 4 and Statement of the Hypothesis of the Model	123
3. Some Philosophical Implications of the Hypothesis	155
4. The Addition of Principle 5 to Handle Certain Borderline and Other Cases	179
4. Experimental Applications and Empirical Confirmation of the Theory	186
1. Knowledge of Actions	186
2. Experiments with Inverting Spectacles	194
3. Seeing with the Skin	212
4. Implications for Psycholinguistics	222

APPENDICES

I. The Manifold of Coapplicable FST-descriptions	249
II. Some Metalinguistic Implications of the Hypothesis	262
1. Background and Introduction	262
2. Terminology and Conventions	264
3. Operationism Is False	266
4. Analytical Behaviorism Is True	270
III. Conceptualizing Structures	281
IV. Abstract of Principle 4 and Answers to Objections	285
Science Abstract	315
Index	319