

CONTENTS

PREFACE	V
CHAPTER I
PHYSICAL REALISM AND NATURALISM	PAGE 1
Emergence and Physical Realism—Human Implications—Remarks on Dewey and Whitehead—The Characteristics of Physical Naturalism—Naturalism's Larger Span.
CHAPTER II
IDEALISM AN INTERLUDE	25
Idealism a Recent Development—The Causal Theory of Perception—Traditional Representative Realism—The Classic Period of Idealism—The Treachery of the Causal Approach—Why the Emphasis on Epistemology.
CHAPTER III
THE RETURN TO REALISM	47
The Philosophic Pot Begins to Boil—Pragmatism and Positivism—The Swing to Realism—Moving to Critical Realism—The Present Situation.
CHAPTER IV
GENERAL PRINCIPLES	62
The Proper Method—Six General Principles—General Implications.
CHAPTER V
LEVELS OF KNOWING	83
The Matrix of Cognition—Directed Organization and Knowing—Organic Attention and Felt Awareness—Perceiving and Things as Perceived—An Estimation of Perceptual Knowing—Scientific Knowing—Reason and Method—Is the Ultra-Microscopic Perceptible?—General Conclusions.

CHAPTER VI

BELIEFS AND TRUTH

PAGE
105

Why the Dispute about Truth—Why the Bias against Correspondence—Correspondence as an Implication, not a Test—What Should We Mean by Truth?—Levels of Knowing and Truth—Should We Speak of Cognitive Relations?—Conclusions Summarized.

CHAPTER VII

THE FACTORS OF KNOWING

132

The Reach of Knowing—A Fuller Analysis of the Act—Consciousness and the Mind—Factors of Perceiving—Final Contrast with Other Views.

CHAPTER VIII

LOGICAL CONCEPTUALISM AND ONTOLOGICAL NOMINALISM

155

The Theory of Universals—The Status of Concepts—Psychologism and Meanings—Must Similarity be Reduced to Identify?—Symbols, Concepts, and Logical Identity—General Conclusions.

CHAPTER IX

KNOWING A COMMON WORLD

184

Pragmatism and a Common World—Knowing the Same Thing—Operative and Logical Identity—Some Applications of These Distinctions—Do Classes Exist?—A Summary of Conclusions.

CHAPTER X

FACTS, KNOWLEDGE AND EXISTENCE

207

Readjusting Rationalism and Empiricism—Critical Realism and Physical Science—Kinds of Knowledge—What Are Facts?—Logic and Existence.

CHAPTER XI

PHYSICS AND ONTOLOGY

239

Relativity and Measurement—Newtonian Space and Time—Physical Reality as Extended—Ars Mensurandi

CONTENTS

xiii

—Operational Simultaneity—Physical Identity and Duration—A Few Words about the General Theory—Suggestions.

PAGE

CHAPTER XII

A DEFENSE OF SUBSTANCE

274

Answering Berkeley—Substance and Thinghood—Aristotelianism and Materialism—A Scientist and Substance—Matter and the Reach of Knowing—Panpsychism and Matter—Substance and Events—Organization and Things—Quality and Being.

CHAPTER XIII

THE ONTOLOGY OF SPACE AND TIME

311

Relativity and Idealism—The Ontology of Space—Mass and Energy—Principle of Locality—The Ontology of Time—Real Time Local—Laws of Nature and the Quantity t —Real Time as Absolute.

CHAPTER XIV

UNDERCUTTING TRADITIONAL PARADOXES

340

The Paradoxes of Zeno—The Paradox of Collections—A Few Remarks about Classes—The Paradoxes of Motion—Movement and a Referent—The Dialectic of Internal Relations—The Temporal Infinite.

CHAPTER XV

INDUCTION AND CAUSALITY

371

Causation Is Not Regular Sequence—Deductive versus Inductive Logic—A Few Words about Particular Facts—The Inductive Leap—Induction Always Empirical—Remarks upon Probability.

CHAPTER XVI

CONSCIOUSNESS AND THE BRAIN-MIND

406

Consciousness and Introspection—The "Under-the-Hat" Theory of Mind—Remarks on Lovejoy and Pratt—The Spatializing of Consciousness—A Critique of Hocking—Intelligence and Teleology.

CHAPTER XVII

	PAGE
THE NATURE AND STATUS OF VALUE	444
Value Imperatives and Fact—Are There Intrinsic Values—Conditions of Valuing—Assignments Complexly Grounded—Factuality and Judgments of Value—A Comparison with Dewey's Outlook.
INDEX OF NAMES	479
SUBJECT INDEX	483