

CONTENTS

Chapter	Page
Eleven: BERKELEY (1)            Life — Works — Spirit of Berkeley's            thought — Theory of Vision.	9
Twelve: BERKELEY (2)            Words and their meanings — Abstract            general ideas — The esse of sensible            things is percipi — Sensible things are            ideas — Material substance is a mean-            ingless term — The reality of sensible            things — Berkeley and the representa-            tive theory of perception.	20
Thirteen: BERKELEY (3)            Finite spirits; their existence, nature            and immortal character — The order of            Nature — Berkeley's empiricist interpre-            tation of physics, especially as seen in            the De motu — The existence and na-            ture of God — The relation of sensible            things to ourselves and to God — Cau-            sality — Berkeley and other philosophers            — Some remarks on Berkeley's ethical            ideas — A note on Berkeley's influence.	36
Fourteen: HUME (1)            Life and writings — The science of hu-            man nature — Impressions and ideas —            The association of ideas — Substance            and relations — Abstract general ideas            — Relations of ideas; mathematics —	63

Chapter		Page
	Matters of fact — The analysis of causality — The nature of belief.
Fifteen:	HUME (2) Our belief in the existence of bodies — Minds and the problem of personal identity — The existence and nature of God — Scepticism.	97
Sixteen:	HUME (3) Introductory — The passions, direct and indirect — Sympathy — The will and liberty — The passions and the reason — Moral distinctions and the moral sense — Benevolence and utility — Justice — General remarks.	122
Seventeen:	HUME (4) Politics as a science — The origin of society — The origin of government — The nature and limits of allegiance — The laws of nations — General remarks.	145
Eighteen:	FOR AND AGAINST HUME Introductory remarks — Adam Smith — Price — Reid — Campbell — Beattie — Stewart — Brown — Concluding remarks.	157
	APPENDIX: A Short Bibliography	197
	NOTES	204
	INDEX	213