INTRODUCTION

I. An Introduction to Metaphysics for Empiricists	3
---	---

PART ONE. CATEGOREMATICS

II. On the Topics and Definitions of the Categories	19
(1) The Number and Source of the Categories	19
(2) A Sample of the Range of Categories	22
(3) The Problem of Definition: Plato	25
(4) The Problem of Definition: Aristotle	29
(5) The Categories Analyzed in Definitions	32
III. Some Typically Selected Categories	38
(A) On the Universal	38
(B) On the Individual	54
(C) On Substance	65
(D) On Quality	76
(E) On Relations	86
(1) Unary Classes and Unique Members	86
(2) Class and Members	90
(3) Membership and Inclusion	91

PART TWO. AXIOMATICS

IV. On the Theory of Induction	97
(1) Induction and Probability	97
(2) Logical Induction, Empirical Probability	100
(3) Phenomenological Bearings	103
(4) Problems in Scientific Induction	105
(5) General Conclusions	107
V. On the Connections Between the Two Worlds	109
VI. A Logically Primitive and Empirically Verifiable Ontology	120
VII. Propositions and Facts	133
(1) Introduction	133
(2) Epistemology	135

(3) Independence and Overlapping	136
(4) Propositions Alone	137
(5) Facts Alone	139
(6) Propositions and Facts Together	140
(7) The Methodology Required	142
(8) Properties of Systems	144

PART THREE. SYSTEMICS

VIII. The Domain of Finite Ontology	149
(1) Categorematics	155
(2) Axiomatics	157
(3) Systemics	158
(4) Ethics	159
(5) Practics	160
(6) Historics	162
(7) Epistemics	163
IX. The Range of Dyadic Ontology	165
(1) Ontologies of the Pure Type	166
(2) Variations of the Pure Type	167
(3) Variations of the Mixed Type	171
(4) The Structure of Intensity	173

PART FOUR. ETHICS

X. An Objective, Empirical Ethics	177
(1) Ethics as a Field of Inquiry	177
(2) Empirical Elements: The Objects Named	180
(3) Empirical Structure: The Names Combined into Elementary Propositions	183
(4) Logical Elements: The Elementary Propositions Combined into Complex Propositions	187
(5) Mathematical Structure: The Complex Propositions Translated into Axioms	190
(6) Applications	192
XI. Ethical Variations on a Theme by Rosmini-Serbati	196
XII. The Ethics of Action	209

PART FIVE. PRACTICS

XIII. The Rational Unconscious	229
XIV. Culture as Applied Ontology	235
XV. Toward an Analysis of the Basic Value System	243
XVI. The Natural Society	258
XVII. Language and Metaphysics	272

PART SIX. HISTORICS

XVIII. History of Dyadic Ontology	295
(1) Introduction	295
(2) The Orphic Theogony	296
(3) The Pre-Socratic Dichotomy	298
(4) The Platonic Synthesis	299
(5) The Speusippian Excess	300
(6) The Aristotelian Correction	301
(7) The Idealistic Restoration	302
(8) The Nominalistic Reaction	303
(9) The Realistic Equilibrium	305
(10) The Realistic Exploration	306
(11) Conclusions	308
XIX. Aristotle as Finite Ontologist	310
XX. Kant and Metaphysics	327

PART SEVEN. EPISTEMICS

XXI. The Range of Sensational Epistemology	357
XXII. Knowing About Semipalatinsk	364
XXIII. An Ontology of Knowledge	370
(1) The Appearance of Knowing	371
(2) Knowledge's Ontological Status	374
(3) Ontological Aspects of Language Systems	376
(4) Ontological Structure	379
Index	383
