

Contents

Acknowledgments	9
-----------------	---

I Structural

Introductory
1 Motivation	13
2 The plot	15
3 References	17

1 Intellectual Virtues
1 Some structures of virtue	19
1.1 Straightening a stick	19
1.2 Genera of virtue	19
1.3 Genus and species	21
2 Virtues, skills and habits	24
3 Doxastic Rectitude	30
3.1 Capacities and virtues	30
3.2 'Rectitude'	31
3.3 Some strategies of rectitude	32
3.3.1 Getting the true	32
3.3.2 Shunning the false	35
4 Rectitude, Reliability and Responsibility	36
4.1 Reliability a skill	36
4.2 Responsibility and regulative virtues	38
5 The relations of credulity to scepticism	38

II Excess

2 Reason and virtue in the Passions
1 Ethics and Epistemology	45
2 Descartes' intellectualist ethics	46
2.1 An outline of intellectualism	46
2.2 Controlling our responses to the external world	48
2.3 Knowledge and self-control	51
2.4 Reason, will and virtue	53
3 The Vice of Credulity
1 The Discovery of Credulity	57
1.1 My mistakes and their correction	57
1.2 What Descartes says he has noticed: Meditations I	59
1.3 Strategies for discovering one's errors:indirections in the Meditations	61
1.3.1 The assurance of the senses	61
1.3.2 Premature prudence	63

1.3.3 A glimpse of something better	65
1.4 Strategies for discovering one's errors: common sense in the Discourse	68
1.5 Strategies for discovering one's errors: doctrine in the Principles	70
2 Responding to the Discovery of Credulity	74
4 The Control of Credulity
1 Error and Theodicy	79
1.1 Situating the problem of evil	79
1.1.1 The place of the problem	79
1.1.2 The structure of the problem	82
1.2 The perfection of the faculty for judging	83
1.2.1 Is error natural?	83
1.2.2 A faculty appropriate to humans	85
1.2.3 Negation and privation in the faculty for judging	86
1.3 The role of the intellect in the earlier writings	88
1.3.1 The will and the truths of faith in the Rules	88
1.3.2 Reason in the rationalist project of the Rules	90
1.3.3 Throwing off credulity in the Discourse	91
2 Intellect and will	91
2.1 The distinction of intellect and will	91
2.1.1 Two faculties and two types of cognitive state	91
2.1.2 The cause of ignorance: absences from the intellect	94
2.1.3 The cause of error: believing what one does not understand	95
2.2 The infinite will	96
2.2.1 Experiencing the will as infinite	96
2.2.2 Infinity and comparative strength: the will against credulity	98
3 Descartes' respectability	99
5 Reason, Assent and Eternal Truth
1 Reason and light	105
1.1 Intuition and truth	105
1.2 A regress of faculties	108
1.2.1 What the will sees	108
1.2.2 A simple model	109
2 Grades of assent	110
2.1 Deciding to believe	110
2.1.1 An empiricist prejudice: passivity in belief-formation	110
2.1.2 Truth-centredness as a decision	110
2.1.3 Hobbes against willing belief	113
2.2 Indifference and spontaneity	116
2.2.1 Indifference to the deliverances of the senses	116

2.2.2 Counter-causal plumping: a first grade of liberty	118
2.2.3 Seeing the ratio : a second grade of liberty	119
2.2.4 God-given thoughts: a third grade of liberty	120
2.2.5 Enlightenment: a fourth grade of liberty?	121
2.2.6 Clarity and liberty	123
3 The unconditioned will and conditional assent	124
3.1 Reason's push and pull	124
3.2 Divine indifference and the eternal truths	124
3.2.1 God's freedom and indifference	124
3.2.2 The causation of the eternal truths	125
3.2.3 Various sizes of infinite will	127
3.3 True belief a conditional good	128
3.3.1 The hypotheticalness of enquiry	128
3.3.2 Letters to Mesland: dissenting from a knowable truth	129
3.3.3 Doxastic rectitude: a skill or a virtue?	132
3.4 Recapitulation	133
4 Doxastic Pelagianism	134
4.1 A missing accusation	134
4.2 A distinction of levels	136
4.3 Man's fallen state	137
4.4 Nature and virtue	139

III Defect

6 The Modes of Scepticism
1 Locating Scepticism	143
2 Modes and Modishness	145
2.1 Dogmatism and disappointment	145
2.2 Acquiring sceptical ability	146
2.3 A scepticism to live by	150
2.3.1 Suspending and insulating	150
2.3.2 Interim scepticism: whence the maxims of Discourse III	151
2.3.3 Interim scepticism: avoiding commitment	153
2.4 The encounter with de Chandoux	154
2.5 Descartes' polemic against learning	155
2.5.1 Dialectic and the practical philosophy	155
2.5.2 Authority and conflict	158
2.5.3 Learning and method	160
3 Retreat to method	161
7 The Form of Scepticism
1 Standards	167
1.1 Belief-defeaters	167
1.2 Standard-defeaters and defeater-eaters	168
2 Standard-defeaters in the Meditations	170

2.1 Madness	170
2.1.1 Unfavourable circumstances	170
2.1.2 The commonsense of the sane	171
2.2 Dreaming	172
2.2.1 The defeater (Meditations I)	172
2.2.2 Coherence and the dreaming hypothesis (Meditations VI)	176
2.3. The demon	180
2.3.1 The demon's reach	180
2.3.2 The demon and the criterion	181
3 Demonic powers	183
3.1 How the demon deceives	183
3.2 Can the demon be eaten?	185
3.2.1 The epistemic possibility of a demon	185
3.2.2 Does divine veracity exclude the demon?	186
3.2.3 God and the demon	187
4 How scepticism is a vice	189

IV The Mean

8 Tota methodus

1 Direction and method	195
2 The first precept: evidence	198
2.1 Avoiding carelessness	198
2.2 What I have no occasion to doubt	200
3 The second precept: analysis	202
4 The third precept: order	204
5 The fourth precept: reconstruction	207
6 The precepts viewed negatively	210

9 Rectitude and Science

1 Virtue and Method	213
1.1 Virtue and calculation	213
1.2 The rules in the Rules	214
1.3 Virtue and rationalism	216
2 What rectitude requires: the true	217
2.1 Where to begin	217
2.2 How to advance: over the rainbow	220
2.3 The shape of completed science	224
2.3.1 The tree in the 'Letter-Preface' to the Principles	224
2.3.2 How to climb the tree	227
2.3.3 Tangles in the tree: the discreet charm of stuff-types	230
3 What rectitude permits: the expedient	233
3.1 Moral certainty	233
3.2 Hypotheses	239

3.2.1 Causes and effects	239
3.2.2 What a false account can tell us	244
3.2.2.1 A fable	244
3.2.2.2 The irrelevance of experience	248
3.3 Admonitions	253
3.3.1 Empirical adequacy	253
3.3.2 A use for scratches	256
4 What rectitude forbids: the false	260
4.1 What might be false	260
4.2 What we have grounds for thinking is false	260
Afterword	267
Bibliography	269
Index Locorum	289
Index Nominum	303