

CONTENTS

Preface page vii

INTRODUCTION: TRADITIONAL PREJUDICES AND THE RETURN TO PHENOMENA

1 The 'Sensation' as a Unit of Experience	3
2 'Association' and the 'Projection of Memories'	13
3 'Attention' and 'Judgement'	26
4 The Phenomenal Field	52

PART ONE: THE BODY

Experience and objective thought. The problem of the body	67
1 The Body as Object and Mechanistic Physiology	73
2 The Experience of the Body and Classical Psychology	90
3 The Spatiality of One's own Body and Motility	98
4 The Synthesis of One's own Body	148
5 The Body in its Sexual Being	154
6 The Body as Expression, and Speech	174

PART TWO: THE WORLD AS PERCEIVED

The theory of the body is already a theory of perception	203
1 Sense Experience	207
2 Space	243
3 The Thing and the Natural World	299
4 Other Selves and the Human World	346

PART THREE: BEING-FOR-ITSELF AND BEING-IN-THE-WORLD

1 The Cogito	369
2 Temporality	410
3 Freedom	434
Bibliography	457
Index	463