

CONTENTS

Preface	9
Acknowledgments	12
Abbreviations	13
Introduction: Interpretation & the Fall	17
Models of Interpretations of Interpretation
On the Categories "Creation" and "Fall"
A Note on a Note from Caputo's Against Ethics
In the Beginning
PART ONE: The Fallenness of Hermeneutics
1 Paradise Regained	37
Reading with Dante's Adam: Koivisto
A Post Card from the Edge: Koivisto Meets Derrida
Overcoming (the) Tradition: Lints
Des Tours de Babel : On Interpretation/Translation
2 Through a Mirror Darkly	61
The Fallenness of Creation: Pannenberg
Trouble in Paradise
Creation as Original Sin
Through a Glass Darkly, But . . .
Ideal Fusion: Gadamer and Habermas
PART TWO: A Hermeneutics of Fallenness
3 Falling into the Garden	87
The Interpretedness of Dasein
The Fallenness of the Everyday
Heidegger's Disclaimers
Heidegger's Faith
Reading the New Testament Otherwise Than Heidegger

4 Edenic Violence	115
Derrida's Reading of Writing
Intersubjective Violence
The Infinite and the Ghost of Metaphysics Past
PART THREE: Toward a Creational Hermeneutic
5 Interpreting the Fall	133
Toward an Augustinian Hermeneutic
The Time of Language: The Fall to Interpretation in Early Augustine
The Time of the Fall
The Fall to Language: Interiority and Signification
The Fall into Time: Language and Temporal Succession
The Fall to Interpretation: Summary
Deconstructing Augustine: Toward a Creational Hermeneutic
Time, Space and the Goodness of Creation
An Augustinian Philosophical Hermeneutic
6 Interpretation in Eden	149
Human Be-ing and the Conditions of Hermeneutics
Situationality and Intersubjectivity
Traditionality and Intersubjectivity
Undecidability
The Goodness of Creation
Before Interpretation
The Postmodern Condition
The World as Limit: A Phenomenological Criterion
The Ethics of Interpretation
Of Spirit: "Yes" and Amen
Notes	185
Indexes	219