

Contents

PREFACE

v

1. ON MAN IN THE WORLD

On man's search for himself	1
On man and the world he builds	5
On man and nature	7
On judgment	10
On judgment, language, and nature	14
On signs, concepts, and symbols	21
On language, quantity, and quality	27
On judgment and rationality	30
On judgment, mystery, and dependence	34

2. ON PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION

On philosophical judgment	41
On philosophy and religion	44
On the problems in defining religion	50
On faith and religion	54
On God and religion	64
On institutions, morality, and religion	70
A definition of religion	74
On religious and nonreligious languages	80
Some summary remarks	88

3. ON RELIGION AND MORALITY

On moral judgment and inquiry	94
On four views of morality and religion	98
On John Dewey's view of morality and religion	115
On the nonmoral dimensions of religion	125
On nonreligious morality	131
On the interaction of morality and religion	136
Some summary remarks	148

4. ON RELIGION AND ART

An historical sketch	154
On Santayana's views of the arts and religion	161
On the inadequacies of Santayana's views	167
On meaning in art and religion	171
On art, religion, and metaphysics	184
On the similar powers of the arts and religions	187
On the dissimilarities of the arts and religions	192
On religion, art, and the community	199
On consistency and conflict in religion and art	209
Some summary remarks	216

5. ON RELIGION AND TRUTH

On the conflicts and questions	219
On empiricism and the truth of religion	221
On religion and the coherence theory of truth	234
On religion and pragmatism	238
On the propriety of calling religion "true"	251
On religious truth and revelation	270
On religion as only symptomatic	273
On the world required for religious judgment	278
On the forms of religious truth	283

CONTENTS	xi
On the ways of validating religious judgments	292
On how religious judgments are false	306
Some summary remarks	313
APOLOGIA	316
BIBLIOGRAPHY	323
INDEX	329