

Contents

Foreword: Back to the Future: Marcuse and New Critical Theory Martin Beck Matušík	vii
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction: Why a New Critical Theory? William S. Wilkerson and Jeffrey Paris	1
Part I: Visions and Methods
1 Obstinate Critique and the Possibility of the Future Jeffrey Paris	15
2 Redemption in the Impasse: An Other Communism Bill Martin	37
3 Toward a New Critical Theory James L. Marsh	49
4 Inhabiting Hope: Contributions to a New Materialist Phenomenology William S. Wilkerson	65
Part II: Intersections beyond Postmodernism
5 Marcuse and the Quest for Radical Subjectivity Douglas Kellner	85
6 Challenging the Colonial Contract: The Zapatistas' Insurgent Imagination Patricia Huntington	105

Part III: Critique of Technology

7	Marcuse and the Aestheticization of Technology Andrew Feenberg	135
8	Women Carrying Water: At the Crossroads of Technology and Critical Theory Yoko Arisaka	155
9	Chronotopology: Critique of Spatiotemporal Regimes Eduardo Mendieta	175
 Part IV: Race, Sexuality, and the Normative Foundations of Criticism
10	Can Queer Theory Be Critical Theory? Michael Hames-García	201
11	The Mother Wit of Justice: Eros and Hubris in the African American Context Cynthia Willett	223
12	Imagining the Horizon Gail Weiss	249
	Index	263
	About the Contributors	271