Prop. XIV. Besides God no substance can be granted or conceived	100
Prop. XV. Whatsoever is, is in God, and without God nothing can be, or be conceived	189
Prop. XVI. From the necessity of the divine nature must follow an infinite number of things in infinite ways—that is, all things which can fall within the sphere of infinite intellect	193
Prop. XVII. God acts solely by the laws of his own nature, and is not constrained by anyone	193
Prop. XVIII. God is the indwelling and not the transient cause of all things	196
Prop. XIX. God, and all the attributes of God, are eternal	196
Prop. XX. The existence of God and his essence are one and the same	197
Prop. XXI. All things which follow from the absolute nature of any attribute of God must always exist and be infinite, or, in other words, are eternal and infinite through the said attribute	197
Prop. XXII. Whatever follows from any attribute of God, in so far as it is modified by a modification, which exists necessarily and as infinite, through the said attribute, must also exist necessarily and as infinite	198
Prop. XXIII. Every mode which exists both necessarily and as infinite must necessarily follow either from the absolute nature of some attribute of God, or from an attribute modified by a modification which exists necessarily and as infinite	199
Prop. XXIV. The essence of things produced by God does not involve existence	199
Prop. XXV. God is the efficient cause not only of the existence of things, but also of their essence	199
Prop. XXVI. A thing which is conditioned to act in a particular manner has necessarily been thus conditioned by God; and that which has

- not been conditioned by God cannot condition itself to act* 200
- Prop. XXVII. A thing, which has been conditioned by God to act in a particular way, cannot render itself unconditioned 200
- Prop. XXVIII. Every individual thing, or everything which is finite and has a conditioned existence, cannot exist or be conditioned to act, unless it be conditioned for existence and action by a cause other than itself, which also is finite and has a conditioned existence; and likewise this cause cannot in its turn exist or be conditioned to act, unless it be conditioned for existence and action by another cause, which also is finite and has a conditioned existence, and so on to infinity 200
- Prop. XXIX. Nothing in the universe is contingent, but all things are conditioned to exist and operate in a particular manner by the necessity of the divine nature 202
- Prop. XXX. Intellect, in function finite, or in function infinite, must comprehend the attributes of God and the modifications of God, and nothing else 202
- Prop. XXXI. The intellect in function, whether finite or infinite, as will, desire, love, &c., should be referred to passive nature and not to active nature 203
- Prop. XXXII. Will cannot be called a free cause, but only a necessary cause 203
- Prop. XXXIII. Things could not have been brought into being by God in any manner or in any order different from that which has in fact obtained 204
- Prop. XXXIV. God's power is identical with his essence 208
- Prop. XXXV. Whatsoever we conceive to be in the power of God, necessarily exists 208

Part II. Of the Nature and Origin of the Mind	216
Preface	216
Definitions	216
Axioms	217
Prop. I. Thought is an attribute of God, or God is a thinking thing	217
Prop. II. Extension is an attribute of God, or God is an extended thing	218
Prop. III. In God there is necessarily the idea not only of his essence, but also of all things which necessarily follow from his essence	218
Prop. IV. The idea of God, from which an infinite number of things follow in infinite ways, can only be one	219
Prop. V. The actual being of ideas owns God as its cause, only in so far as he is considered as a thinking thing, not in so far as he is unfolded in any other attribute; that is, the ideas both of the attributes of God and of particular things do not own as their efficient cause their objects, or the things perceived, but God himself in so far as he is a thinking thing	219
Prop. VI. The modes of any given attribute are caused by God, in so far as he is considered through the attribute of which they are modes, and not in so far as he is considered through any other attribute	220
Prop. VII. The order and connection of ideas is the same as the order and connection of things	220
Prop. VIII. The ideas of particular things, or of modes, that do not exist, must be comprehended in the infinite idea of God, in the same way as the formal essences of particular things or modes are contained in the attributes of God	221

- Prop. IX. The idea of an individual thing actually existing is caused by God, not in so far as he is infinite, but in so far as he is considered as affected by another idea of a thing actually existing, of which he is the cause, in so far as he is affected by a third idea, and so on to infinity 222
- Prop. X. The being of substance does not appertain to the essence of man—in other words, substance does not constitute the actual being of man 223
- Prop. XI. The first element, which constitutes the actual being of the human mind, is the idea of some particular thing actually existing 224
- Prop. XII. Whatsoever comes to pass in the object of the idea, which constitutes the human mind, must be perceived by the human mind, or there will necessarily be an idea in the human mind of the said occurrence. That is, if the object of the idea constituting the human mind be a body, nothing can take place in that body without being perceived by the mind 225
- Prop. XIII. The object of the idea constituting the human mind is the body, in other words a certain mode of extension which actually exists, and nothing else 226

- human body is affected by external bodies, must involve the nature of the human body, and also the nature of the external body* 232
- Prop. XVII. If the human body is affected in a manner which involves the nature of any external body, the human mind will regard the said external body as actually existing, or as present to itself, until the human body be affected in such a way as to exclude the existence of the said external body 232
- Prop. XVIII. If the human body has once been affected by two or more bodies at the same time, when the mind afterwards imagines any of them, it will straightway remember the others also 234
- Prop. XIX. The human mind has no knowledge of the body, and does not know it to exist, save through the ideas of the modifications whereby the body is affected 235
- Prop. XX. The idea or knowledge of the human mind is also in God, following in God in the same manner, and being referred to God in the same manner, as the idea or knowledge of the human body 236
- Prop. XXI. This idea of the mind is united to the mind in the same way as the mind is united to the body 236
- Prop. XXII. The human mind perceives not only the modifications of the body, but also the ideas of such modifications 237
- Prop. XXIII. The mind does not know itself, except in so far as it perceives the ideas of the modifications of the body 237
- Prop. XXIV. The human mind does not involve an adequate knowledge of the parts composing the human body 238
- Prop. XXV. The idea of each modification of the human body does not involve an adequate knowledge of the external body 239

- Prop. XXVI. The human mind does not perceive any external body as actually existing, except through the ideas of the modifications of its own body 239
- Prop. XXVII. The idea of each modification of the human body does not involve an adequate knowledge of the human body itself 239
- Prop. XXVIII. The ideas of the modifications of the human body, in so far as they have reference only to the human mind, are not clear and distinct, but confused 240
- Prop. XXIX. The idea of the idea of each modification of the human body does not involve an adequate knowledge of the human mind 240
- Prop. XXX. We can only have a very inadequate knowledge of the duration of our body 241
- Prop. XXXI. We can only have a very inadequate knowledge of the duration of particular things external to ourselves 242
- Prop. XXXII. All ideas, in so far as they are referred to God, are true 242
- Prop. XXXIII. There is nothing positive in ideas, which causes them to be called false 242
- Prop. XXXIV. Every idea, which in us is absolute or adequate and perfect, is true 242
- Prop. XXXV. Falsity consists in the privation of knowledge, which inadequate, fragmentary, or confused ideas involve 242
- Prop. XXXVI. Inadequate or confused ideas follow by the same necessity, as adequate or clear and distinct ideas 243
- Prop. XXXVII. That which is common to all, and which is equally in a part and in the whole, does not constitute the essence of any particular thing 244
- Prop. XXXVIII. Those things, which are common to all, and which are equally in a part and in the whole, cannot be conceived except adequately 244
- Prop. XXXIX. That, which is common to and a

property of the human body and such other bodies as are wont to affect the human body, and which is present equally in each part of either, or in the whole, will be represented by an adequate idea in the mind 244

Prop. XL. Whatsoever ideas in the mind follow from ideas which are therein adequate are also themselves adequate 245

Prop. XLI. Opinion is the only source of falsity, reason and intuition are necessarily true 248

Prop. XLII. Reason and intuition, not opinion, teach us to distinguish the true from the false 248

Prop. XLIII. He who has a true idea, simultaneously knows that he has a true idea, and cannot doubt of the truth of the thing perceived 248

Prop. XLIV. It is not in the nature of reason to regard things as contingent, but as necessary 250

Prop. XLV. Every idea of every body, or of every particular thing actually existing, necessarily involves the eternal and infinite essence of God 251

Prop. XLVI. The knowledge of the eternal and infinite essence of God, which every idea involves, is adequate and perfect 252

Prop. XLVII. The human mind has an adequate knowledge of the eternal and infinite essence of God 252

Prop. XLVIII. In the mind there is no absolute or free will; but the mind is determined to wish this or that by a cause, which has also been determined by another cause, and this last by another cause, and so on to infinity 253

Prop. XLIX. There is in the mind no volition or affirmation and negation, save that which an idea, inasmuch as it is an idea, involves 254

Postulates 264

Prop. I. Our mind is in certain cases active, and

- in certain cases passive. In so far as it has adequate ideas, it is necessarily active, and in so far as it has inadequate ideas, it is necessarily passive* 264
- Prop. II. Body cannot determine mind to think, neither can mind determine body to motion or rest or any state different from these, if such there be 265
- Prop. III. The activities of the mind arise solely from adequate ideas; the passive states of the mind depend solely on inadequate ideas 269
- Prop. IV. Nothing can be destroyed, except by a cause external to itself 270
- Prop. V. Things are naturally contrary, that is, cannot exist in the same object, in so far as one is capable of destroying the other 270
- Prop. VI. Everything, in so far as it is in itself, endeavours to persist in its own being 270
- Prop. VII. The endeavour, wherewith everything endeavours to persist in its own being, is nothing else but the actual essence of the thing in question 271
- Prop. VIII. The endeavour, whereby a thing endeavours to persist in its being, involves no finite time, but an indefinite time 271
- Prop. IX. The mind, both in so far as it has clear and distinct ideas, and also in so far as it has confused ideas, endeavours to persist in its being for an indefinite period, and of this endeavour it is conscious 271
- Prop. X. An idea which excludes the existence of our body cannot be postulated in our mind, but is contrary thereto 272
- Prop. XI. Whatsoever increases or diminishes, helps or hinders the power of activity in our body, the idea thereof increases or diminishes, helps or hinders the power of thought in our mind 272
- Prop. XII. The mind, as far as it can, endeavours

- to conceive those things, which increase or help the power of activity in the body* 273
- Prop. XIII. When the mind conceives things which diminish or hinder the body's power of activity, it endeavours, as far as possible, to remember things which exclude the existence of the first-named things 274
- Prop. XIV. If the mind has once been affected by two emotions at the same time, it will, whenever it is afterwards affected by one of the two, be also affected by the other 275
- Prop. XV. Anything can, accidentally, be the cause of pleasure, pain, or desire 275
- Prop. XVI. Simply from the fact that we conceive that a given object has some point of resemblance with another object which is wont to affect the mind pleasurablely or painfully, although the point of resemblance be not the efficient cause of the said emotions, we shall still regard the first-named object with love or hate 276
- Prop. XVII. If we conceive that a thing which is wont to affect us painfully has any point of resemblance with another thing which is wont to affect us with an equally strong emotion of pleasure, we shall hate the first-named thing, and at the same time we shall love it 276
- Prop. XVIII. A man is as much affected pleasurablely or painfully by the image of a thing past or future as by the image of a thing present 277
- Prop. XIX. He who conceives that the object of his love is destroyed will feel pain; if he conceives that it is preserved, he will feel pleasure 278
- Prop. XX. He who conceives that the object of his hate is destroyed will feel pleasure 279
- Prop. XXI. He who conceives that the object of his love is affected pleasurablely or painfully, will himself be affected pleasurablely or painfully; and the one or the other emotion will be greater

- or less in the lover according as it is greater or less in the thing loved* 279
- Prop. XXII. If we conceive that anything pleasurable affects some object of our love, we shall be affected with love towards that thing. Contrariwise, if we conceive that it affects an object of our love painfully, we shall be affected with hatred towards it 279
- Prop. XXIII. He who conceives that an object of his hatred is painfully affected, will feel pleasure. Contrariwise, if he thinks that the said object is pleurably affected, he will feel pain. Each of these emotions will be greater or less, according as its contrary is greater or less in the object of hatred 280
- Prop. XXIV. If we conceive that anyone pleurably affects an object of our hate, we shall feel hatred towards him also. If we conceive that he painfully affects the said object, we shall feel love towards him 281
- Prop. XXV. We endeavour to affirm, concerning ourselves and concerning what we love, everything that we conceive to affect pleurably ourselves or the loved object. Contrariwise, we endeavour to negative everything, which we conceive to affect painfully ourselves or the loved object 281
- Prop. XXVI. We endeavour to affirm, concerning that which we hate, everything which we conceive to affect it painfully; and, contrariwise, we endeavour to deny, concerning it, everything which we conceive to affect it pleurably 281
- Prop. XXVII. By the very fact that we conceive a thing, which is like ourselves, and which we have not regarded with any emotion, to be affected with any emotion, we are ourselves affected with a like emotion 282
- Prop. XXVIII. We endeavour to bring about whatsoever we conceive to conduce to pleasure;

- but we endeavour to remove or destroy whatsoever we conceive to be truly repugnant thereto, or to conduce to pain* 283
- Prop. XXIX. We shall also endeavour to do whatsoever we conceive men to regard with pleasure, and contrariwise we shall shrink from doing that which we conceive men to shrink from 284
- Prop. XXX. If any one has done something which he conceives as affecting other men pleasantly, he will be affected by pleasure, accompanied by the idea of himself as a cause; in other words, he will regard himself with pleasure. On the other hand, if he has done anything which he regards as affecting others painfully, he will regard himself with pain 284
- Prop. XXXI. If we conceive that anyone loves, desires, or hates anything which we love, desire, or hate, we shall thereupon regard the thing in question with more steadfast love, &c. On the contrary, if we think that anyone shrinks from something that we love, we shall undergo vacillation of soul 285
- Prop. XXXII. If we conceive that anyone takes delight in something which only one person can possess we shall endeavour to bring it about that the man in question shall not gain possession thereof 286
- Prop. XXXIII. When we love a thing similar to ourselves, we endeavour, as far as we can, to bring it about that it should love us in return 287
- Prop. XXXIV. The greater the emotion with which we conceive a loved object to be affected towards us, the greater will be our complacency 287
- Prop. XXXV. If anyone conceives, that an object of his love joins itself to another with closer bonds of friendship than he himself has attained to, he will be affected with hatred towards the loved object and with envy towards his rival 288
- Prop. XXXVI. He who remembers a thing, in

distinctness wherewith it conceives itself and its own power of activity	300
Prop. LIV. The mind endeavours to conceive only such things as assert its power of activity	301
Prop. LV. When the mind contemplates its own weakness, it feels pain thereat	301
Prop. LVI. There are as many kinds of pleasure, of pain, of desire, and of every emotion compounded of these, such as vacillations of spirit, or derived from these, such as love, hatred, hope, fear, &c., as there are kinds of objects whereby we are affected	302
Prop. LVII. Any emotion of a given individual differs from the emotion of another individual, only in so far as the essence of the one individual differs from the essence of the other	304
Prop. LVIII. Besides pleasure and desire, which are passivities or passions, there are other emotions derived from pleasure and desire which are attributable to us in so far as we are active	305
Prop. LIX. Among all the emotions attributable to the mind as active, there are none which cannot be referred to pleasure or pain	306

- isting is limited, and is infinitely surpassed by the power of external causes* 327
- Prop. IV. It is impossible, that man should not be a part of Nature, or that he should be capable of undergoing no changes, save such as can be understood through his nature only as their adequate cause 327
- Prop. V. The power and increase of every passion, and its persistence in existing are not defined by the power, whereby we ourselves endeavour to persist in existing, but by the power of an external cause compared with our own 328
- Prop. VI. The force of any passion or emotion can overcome the rest of a man's activities or power, so that the emotion becomes obstinately fixed to him 328
- Prop. VII. An emotion can only be controlled or destroyed by another emotion contrary thereto, and with more power for controlling emotion 329
- Prop. VIII. The knowledge of good and evil is nothing else but the emotions of pleasure or pain in so far as we are conscious thereof 329
- Prop. IX. An emotion, whereof we conceive the cause to be with us at the present time, is stronger than if we did not conceive the cause to be with us 330
- Prop. X. Towards something future, which we conceive as close at hand, we are affected more intensely, than if we conceive that its time for existence is separated from the present by a longer interval; so too by the remembrance of what we conceive to have not long passed away we are affected more intensely, than if we conceive that it has long passed away 331
- Prop. XI. An emotion towards that which we conceive as necessary is, when other conditions are equal, more intense than an emotion towards that which is possible, or contingent, or non-necessary 331

- Prop. XII. An emotion towards a thing, which we know not to exist at the present time, and which we conceive as possible, is more intense, other things being equal, than an emotion towards a thing contingent 331
- Prop. XIII. Emotion towards a thing contingent, which we know not to exist in the present, is, other conditions being equal, fainter than an emotion towards a thing past 332
- Prop. XIV. A true knowledge of good and evil cannot check any emotion by virtue of being true, but only in so far as it is considered as an emotion 333
- Prop. XV. Desire arising from the knowledge of good and evil can be quenched or checked by many other desires arising from the emotions whereby we are assailed 333
- Prop. XVI. Desire arising from the knowledge of good and evil, in so far as such knowledge regards what is future, may be more easily controlled or quenched, than the desire for what is agreeable at the present moment 333
- Prop. XVII. Desire arising from the true knowledge of good and evil, in so far as such knowledge is concerned with what is contingent, can be controlled far more easily still, than desire for things that are at present 334
- Prop. XVIII. Desire arising from pleasure is, other things being equal, stronger than desire arising from pain 334
- Prop. XIX. Every man, by the laws of his nature, necessarily desires or shrinks from that which he deems to be good or bad 336
- Prop. XX. The more every man endeavours and is able to seek what is useful to him—in other words, to preserve his own being—the more is he endowed with virtue; on the contrary, in proportion as a man neglects to seek what is useful

- to him, that is, to preserve his own being, he is wanting in power* 337
- Prop. XXI. No one can rightly desire to be blessed, to act rightly, and to live rightly, without at the same time wishing to be, to act, and to live, in other words, to actually exist 337
- Prop. XXII. No virtue can be conceived as prior to this endeavour to preserve one's own being 338
- Prop. XXIII. Man, in so far as he is determined to a particular action because he has inadequate ideas, cannot be absolutely said to act in obedience to virtue; he can only be so described in so far as he is determined for the action because he understands 338
- Prop. XXIV. To act absolutely in obedience to virtue is in us the same thing as to act, to live, or to preserve one's being (these three terms are identical in meaning) in accordance with the dictate of reason on the basis of seeking what is useful to one's self 338
- Prop. XXV. No one wishes to preserve his being for the sake of anything else 339
- Prop. XXVI. Whatever we endeavour in obedience to reason is nothing further than to understand; neither does the mind, in so far as it makes use of reason, judge anything to be useful to it, save such things as are conducive to understanding 339
- Prop. XXVII. We know nothing to be certainly good or evil, save such things as really conduce to understanding, or such as are able to hinder us from understanding 339
- Prop. XXVIII. The mind's highest good is the knowledge of God, and the mind's highest virtue is to know God 340
- Prop. XXIX. No individual thing, which is entirely different from our own nature, can help or check our power of activity, and absolutely nothing

- can do us good or harm, unless it has something in common with our nature* 340
- Prop. XXX. A thing cannot be bad for us through the quality which it has in common with our nature, but it is bad for us in so far as it is contrary to our nature 341
- Prop. XXXI. In so far as a thing is in harmony with our nature, it is necessarily good 341
- Prop. XXXII. In so far as men are a prey to passion, they cannot, in that respect, be said to be naturally in harmony 341
- Prop. XXXIII. Men can differ in nature, in so far as they are assailed by those emotions which are passions or passive states; and to this extent one and the same man is variable and inconstant 342
- Prop. XXXIV. In so far as men are assailed by emotions which are passions, they can be contrary one to another 342
- Prop. XXXV. In so far only as men live in obedience to reason, do they always necessarily agree in nature 343
- Prop. XXXVI. The highest good of those who follow virtue is common to all, and therefore all can equally rejoice therein 345
- Prop. XXXVII. The good which every man who follows after virtue desires for himself, he will also desire for other men, and so much the more, in proportion as he has a greater knowledge of God 345
- Prop. XXXVIII. Whatsoever disposes the human body, so as to render it capable of being affected in an increased number of ways, or of affecting external bodies in an increased number of ways, is useful to man; and is so, in proportion as the body is thereby rendered more capable of being affected or of affecting other bodies in an increased number of ways; con-

- trariwise, whatsoever renders the body less capable in this respect is hurtful to man* 349
- Prop. XXXIX. Whatsoever brings about the preservation of the proportion of motion and rest, which the parts of the human body mutually possess, is good; contrariwise, whatsoever causes a change in such proportion is bad 350
- Prop. XL. Whatsoever conduces to man's social life, or causes men to live together in harmony, is useful, whereas whatsoever brings discord into a State is bad 351
- Prop. XLI. Pleasure in itself is not bad but good; contrariwise, pain in itself is bad 351
- Prop. XLII. Mirth cannot be excessive, but is always good; contrariwise, Melancholy is always bad 351
- Prop. XLIII. Stimulation may be excessive and bad; on the other hand, grief may be good, in so far as stimulation or pleasure is bad 352
- Prop. XLIV. Love and desire may be excessive 352
- Prop. XLV. Hatred can never be good 353
- Prop. XLVI. He, who lives under the guidance of reason, endeavours, as far as possible, to render back love, or kindness, for other men's hatred, anger, contempt, etc., towards him 354
- Prop. XLVII. Emotions of hope and fear cannot be in themselves good 355
- Prop. XLVIII. The emotions of over-esteeem and disparagement are always bad 355
- Prop. XLIX. Over-esteeem is apt to render its object proud 355
- Prop. L. Pity, in a man who lives under the guidance of reason, is in itself bad and useless 355
- Prop. LI. Approval is not repugnant to reason, but can agree therewith and arise therefrom 356
- Prop. LII. Self-approval may arise from reason, and that which arises from reason is the highest possible 357

- Prop. LIII. Humility is not a virtue, or does not arise from reason 35
- Prop. LIV. Repentance is not a virtue, or does not arise from reason; but he who repents of an action is doubly wretched or infirm 35
- Prop. LV. Extreme pride or dejection indicates extreme ignorance of self 35
- Prop. LVI. Extreme pride or dejection indicates extreme infirmity of spirit 35
- Prop. LVII. The proud man delights in the company of flatterers and parasites, but hates the company of the high-minded 35
- Prop. LVIII. Honour (gloria) is not repugnant to reason, but may arise therefrom 36
- Prop. LIX. To all the actions, whereto we are determined by emotions, wherein the mind is passive, we can be determined without emotion by reason 36
- Prop. LX. Desire arising from a pleasure or pain, that is, not attributable to the whole body, but only to one or certain parts thereof, is without utility in respect to man as a whole 36
- Prop. LXI. Desire which springs from reason cannot be excessive 36
- Prop. LXII. In so far as the mind conceives a thing under the dictate of reason, it is affected equally, whether the idea be of a thing present, past, or future 36
- Prop. LXIII. He who is led by fear, and does good in order to escape evil, is not led by reason 36
- Prop. LXIV. The knowledge of evil is an inadequate knowledge 36
- Prop. LXV. Under the guidance of reason we should pursue the greater of two goods and the lesser of two evils 36
- Prop. LXVI. We may, under the guidance of reason, seek a greater good in the future in preference to a lesser good in the present, and we

may seek a lesser evil in the present in preference to a greater evil in the future	366
Prop. LXVII. A free man thinks of nothing less than of death; and his wisdom is a meditation not of death, but of life	367
Prop. LXVIII. If men were born free, they would, so long as they remained free, form no conception of good or evil	367
Prop. LXIX. The virtue of a free man is seen to be as great, when it declines dangers, as when it overcomes them	368
Prop. LXX. The free man, who lives among the ignorant, strives, as far as he can, to avoid receiving favours from them	368
Prop. LXXI. Only free men are thoroughly grateful, one to another	369
Prop. LXXII. The free man never acts fraudulently, but always in good faith	370
Prop. LXXIII. The man, who is guided by reason, is more free in a State, where he lives under a general system of law, than in solitude, where he is independent	370
Appendix on the Right Way of Life	371
Part V. Of the Power of the Understanding, or of Human Freedom	379
Preface	379
Axioms	382
Prop. I. Even as thoughts and the ideas of things are arranged and associated in the mind, so are the modifications of the body or the images of things precisely in the same way arranged and associated in the body	382
Prop. II. If we remove a disturbance of the spirit, or emotion, from the thought of an external cause, and unite it to other thoughts, then will the love or hatred towards that external cause, and also the vacillations of spirit, which arise from these emotions, be destroyed	383

- Prop. III. An emotion, which is a passion, ceases to be a passion, as soon as we form a clear and distinct idea thereof 383
- Prop. IV. There is no modification of the body, whereof we cannot form some clear and distinct conception 383
- Prop. V. An emotion towards a thing which we conceive simply, and not as necessary, or as contingent, or as possible, is, other conditions being equal, greater than any other emotion 385
- Prop. VI. The mind has greater power over the emotions and is less subject thereto, in so far as it understands all things as necessary 385
- Prop. VII. Emotions which are aroused or spring from reason, if we take account of time, are stronger than those which are attributable to particular objects that we regard as absent 386
- Prop. VIII. An emotion is stronger in proportion to the number of simultaneous concurrent causes whereby it is aroused 386
- Prop. IX. An emotion which is attributable to many and diverse causes which the mind regards as simultaneous with the emotion itself is less hurtful, and we are less subject thereto and less affected towards each of its causes, than if it were a different and equally powerful emotion attributable to fewer causes or to a single cause 386
- Prop. X. So long as we are not assailed by emotions contrary to our nature, we have the power of arranging and associating the modifications of our body according to the intellectual order 387
- Prop. XI. In proportion as a mental image is referred to more objects, so is it more frequent, or more often vivid, and affects the mind more 386
- Prop. XII. The mental images of things are more easily associated with the images referred to things which we clearly and distinctly understand, than with others 390

- Prop. XIII. A mental image is more often vivid, in proportion as it is associated with a greater number of other images 390
- Prop. XIV. The mind can bring it about, that all bodily modifications or images of things may be referred to the idea of God 390
- Prop. XV. He who clearly and distinctly understands himself and his emotions loves God, and so much the more in proportion as he more understands himself and his emotions 390
- Prop. XVI. This love towards God must hold the chief place in the mind 390
- Prop. XVII. God is without passions, neither is he affected by any emotion of pleasure or pain 391
- Prop. XVIII. No one can hate God 391
- Prop. XIX. He who loves God cannot endeavour that God should love him in return 391
- Prop. XX. This love towards God cannot be stained by the emotion of envy or jealousy; contrariwise, it is the more fostered in proportion as we conceive a greater number of men to be joined to God by the same bond of love 392
- Prop. XXI. The mind can only imagine anything, or remember what is past, while the body endures 394
- Prop. XXII. Nevertheless in God there is necessarily an idea, which expresses the essence of this or that human body under the form of eternity 394
- Prop. XXIII. The human mind cannot be absolutely destroyed with the body, but there remains of it something which is eternal 394
- Prop. XXIV. The more we understand particular things, the more do we understand God 395
- Prop. XXV. The highest endeavour of the mind, and the highest virtue, is to understand things by intuition 395
- Prop. XXVI. In proportion as the mind is more

- capable of understanding things by intuition, it desires more so to understand things* 396
- Prop. XXVII. From intuition arises the highest possible mental acquiescence 396
- Prop. XXVIII. The endeavour or desire to know things by intuition cannot arise from opinion, but from reason 396
- Prop. XXIX. Whatsoever the mind understands under the form of eternity, it does not understand by virtue of conceiving the present actual existence of the body, but by virtue of conceiving the essence of the body under the form of eternity 397
- Prop. XXX. Our mind, in so far as it knows itself and the body under the form of eternity, has to that extent necessarily a knowledge of God, and knows that it is in God, and is conceived through God 397
- Prop. XXXI. Intuition depends on the mind, as its formal cause, in so far as the mind itself is eternal 398
- Prop. XXXII. Whatsoever we understand by intuition, we take delight in, and our delight is accompanied by the idea of God as cause 398
- Prop. XXXIII. The intellectual love of God, which arises from intuition, is eternal 399
- Prop. XXXIV. The mind is, only while the body endures, subject to those emotions which are attributable to passions 399
- Prop. XXXV. God loves himself with an infinite intellectual love 399
- Prop. XXXVI. The intellectual love of the mind towards God is that very love of God whereby God loves himself, not in so far as he is infinite, but in so far as he can be explained through the essence of the human mind regarded under the form of eternity; in other words, the intellectual love of the mind towards God is part of the infinite love wherewith God loves himself 400

- Prop. XXXVII. There is nothing in nature, which is contrary to this intellectual love, or which can take it away 401
- Prop. XXXVIII. In proportion as the mind understands more things by reason and intuition, it is less subject to those emotions which are evil, and stands in less fear of death 401
- Prop. XXXIX. He, who possesses a body capable of the greatest number of activities, possesses a mind whereof the greatest part is eternal 402
- Prop. XL. In proportion as each thing possesses more of perfection, so is it more active, and less passive; and, vice versâ, in proportion as it is more active, so is it more perfect 403
- Prop. XLI. Even if we did not know that our mind is eternal, we should still consider as of primary importance piety and religion, and generally all things, which in Part IV., we showed to be attributable to courage and high-mindedness 404
- Prop. XLII. Blessedness is not the reward of virtue, but virtue itself; neither do we rejoice therein, because we control our lusts, but, contrariwise, because we rejoice therein, we are able to control our lusts 405
